

Approval Is Given To Extension Work Of State College

Effort Will be Made to Obtain Additional $58,000 From Fertilizer Tag Tax to Match U. S. Funds.

DEMONSTRATION WORK GIVEN WARM PRAISE

Two Agricultural Committees of House Want Agents in Every County in the State.

Committees of the senate and house of Georgia general assembly got down to business Thursday afternoon and took definite action of several important matters which have been hanging fire for a long time. The work of the committees in the afternoon; the waging of a strong filibuster in the senate by opponents of the move to repeal the tax equalization law and the passage of Speaker Neill's bill providing for the use of the Australian or secret ballot system in all Georgia elections were outstanding features of the day's session of the legislature.

Representative McMichael, of Marion, served notice on the house Thursday that he will renew his fight on the state highway department Friday. He said he would begin his fight immediately after the house resolve itself into a committee of the whole to consider his resolution. He said he would present some facts to the members of the house which would "open their eyes."

State College Approved.

One of the important steps of committees was that of the two agricultural committees of the house which adopted a resolution introduced by Representative Beckham, of Dougherty, approving in full the work done at the State College of Agriculture during the year and appointing a subcommittee to devise a plan whereby about $58,000 income from the fertilizer tag tax which is not used by the state bureau of markets can be turned over to the state college to match federal funds so as to put a county demonstration agent in every county in Georgia. The committee also appointed a subcommittee to draft an enabling act which will permit county boards of commissioners and boards of education to supplement the federal and state demonstration work out of county funds.

The appropriations and ways and means committee reported favorably a bill introduced by Representative Ennis, of Baldwin, appropriating $108,000 to complete the nurses home building at the state sanitarium. This committee also approved, by unanimous vote, Representative Reagan's bill exempting women from the payment of poll tax in cases where they do not vote. This bill provides that where women do vote they shall pay poll tax the same as men. The appropriations committee agreed to hear statements from members of confederate veterans who are seeking an appropriation of $144,700 to pay the increased pensioners contained in bills passed at the last session and to take care of the "new class" of pensioners who have not been paid. The veterans will be heard at a session of the committee to be held at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

Dr. Campbell Appears.

At the session of the two house committees on agriculture, Dr. Phil Campbell, head of the demonstration work at the state college, appeared and presented a full and complete statement of the work done by his department together with a detailed statement of expenditures, list of all employees and the amounts of their salaries. He said the federal government, under the Smith-Lever bill, appropriates $182,000 annually for farm demonstration and home economic work in Georgia. He said this fund is matched by the state and county funds. He declared that there are 108 counties in Georgia now supplementing the federal aid money. Dr. Campbell stated that the recent decision of the supreme court holding that county commissioners and county boards of education had no authority to appropriate county funds to supplement work done in the county in only five counties. In other counties the money that should have been furnished by the county authorities is being furnished by private subscription.

"Those who raise the money by private subscription cannot keep it up for a long time and it will be necessary for this legislature to pass an act enabling the county authorities to make the needed appropriations and this law must conform to the recent decision of the supreme court," he told the committee.

U. S. Approves Work.

Dr. Campbell said all of this work is carried on with the approval of the United States department of agriculture and he stated that the department of agriculture must first approve the work by projects before the federal money is available. He said the federal government keeps a careful check on all the work at 4 audits a year.

IRISH INSURGENTS THREATEN CABLES TO UNITED STATES

Property of New York Commercial Cable Company in Ireland Seized by Irregulars.

COMPANY EMPLOYEES BADLY TERRORIZED

Interruption of Cables Involved Would Seriously Cripple U. S. and Europe Communications.

Cork, July 6.—(By the Associated Press.)—Word has reached here that the cable station of the Commercial Cable company, of New York, at Waterville, the terminus of the transatlantic cables, has been threatened by the irregular Irish forces, who have seized property of the company and its employees, terrorized the families of the employees and have demanded the key to the school quarters, to be used as general headquarters of the Irish forces.

On July 1, the first direct operations began against the Commercial Cable's quarters when the Irish threw up sandbag barricades at the coast guard station. The next day irregulars seized a large number of motor cars and motorcycles. They also established a censorship for letters and telegrams.

The situation became very disquieting at Waterville yesterday. The company employees said they had been annoyed while carrying on their cable duty, being followed into the instrument room and into the office and corridors.

The local superintendent of the company said the wives of employees were coming to him in tears. If a protective guard were established, it was feared this would attract the fire of the irregulars on the station.

The zone in which Irish irregulars are causing embarrassment to the transatlantic cable companies extend about fifteen miles along the Kerry coast, in the southwest of Ireland from Waterville, past Ballinskelligh Bay to Valentia. The Commercial Cable company's cables land at the first-named place, and that of the Direct United States cable at Ballinskelligh Bay, and those of the Anglo-American company at Valentia. The Direct United States cable is owned by the British government. Interruption of these cables or interference with their operation will seriously cripple communication between the United States and Europe.

MANY WOULD JOIN FREE STATE ARMY.

Dublin, July 6.—(By the Associated Press.)—In response today to the provisional government's call to arms at each rendezvous long lines stood waiting to join.

Besides members of the volunteers, there were many ordinary citizens for recruitment in the volunteer forces as preliminary to transfer to the actual service list.

During the day great crowds visited the scenes of the fighting but a cordon was drawn to prevent approach to the buildings, only the shells of which are standing and are in danger of falling. From the ruins from time to time an explosion is heard—this caused by ammunition abandoned by the insurgents. The firemen's efforts saved the Sackville Street club and the Nelson pillar but some of the new buildings in the burned part of the street brought many bullet marks.

Business Resumes.

The banks reopened today and the stock exchange will open again Monday. Live stock steamed for England departed tonight with almost normal cargoes.

There still is no definite news of Eamon de Valera. The Evening Telegraph said he was in London.

FIGHT ON PRIMARY SYSTEM LOOMING IN G. O. P. RANKS

Administration Efforts to Modify or Abolish Direct Primary Arouse Progressive Opposition.

FOUR RECENT DEFEATS AROUSE OLD MACHINE

Sufferers From Primary Results Largely Concentrated in Effort to Restore Convention Method

BY ROBERT J. BENDER, United News Staff Correspondent.

Washington, July 6.—Progressive elements within the republican party, aroused at the administration campaign for modification or abolition of the direct primary have begun a counter fight for extension of that system.

Meantime, their bitterness, sharpened by the latest attack on the primary, launched by Senator New, Thursday, in declaring that movements already begun to abolish the law would be pressed, found expression in Senator Norris' comment:

"Standpatters in both parties are behind this movement. To do away with the direct primary would be a step toward monarchial government.

Progressive Plans.

In the belief that the anti-primary sentiment is fostered by a desire to gag the free expression of the people in preference for those to represent them in office at the polls, progressives are fighting back with the following proposals:

1. To radically extend the primary system so as to permit of nomination of presidential candidates by direct vote of the people.

2. To remedy the present primary system by preventing the vast expenditures of money now possible in a contest for office.

Since President Harding some months ago first came out openly in favor of abolishing the direct primary and returning to the old convention system, there has steadily been built up within the administration party a growing campaign to this end. That this had reached the point of a concerted effort was reported in these dispatches June 15. Now Senator New, personal friend of President Harding, and one to suffer recently as a result of the direct primary system, has announced that the system is bad, should be abolished, and a return made to the convention plan. Work to that end, he indicated, is under way in the senate.

Four Recent Ones.

As New frankly admits, many candidates for office who win in the primaries would not have had a chance to win in a convention. Four examples of this are to be found in the recent primary winners—Albert Beveridge who beat New, Gifford Pinchot who beat Attorney-General E. A. Tamm, Smith Brookhart who won the Iowa primary, and Lynn Frazier who beat Senator McCumber in North Dakota. The nomination of none of

Warning Issued To Ward Heelers By Dr. John White

Candidate for Mayoralty Says He Will Not be Bled for Single Cent.

A warning to "ward heelers" and "political grafters" that he is running for the office of mayor of Atlanta purely on his merits and will not be corrupted by perniciou offers of assistance from them, was made in a statement Thursday to The Constitution by Dr. John C. White, prominent Atlanta physician, who recently announced his candidacy for mayor.

In the last few days, since the notice of his formal announcement was made, Dr. White declares that he has been approached and received letters from "ward bosses" who intimated they would throw their support to him provided he would concede certain privileges in the event he is elected to the office. He vehemently rebuked these offers, he asserted, and was prompted to issue the following statement because of them:

"To All Ward Heelers and Political Grafters: Please take notice that I will not be bled by your sort to the extent of one single dollar. I am running on my merits and because I want to be mayor of Atlanta and because I believe I can be of real and constructive service to all the people.

"If the voters wish to support me I will be grateful to them and if elected will discharge the duties of the office to the very best of my ability, but I do not intend to be held up by crooks nor do I wish to buy any office.

"This announcement is prompted by several suggestions of the kind made to me directly and indirectly that I do not relish. Therefore, ward heelers and grafters can give me a wide berth. I expect to be elected and will go into office with clean hands."

Hundreds to Meet Today to Discuss World Exposition

THREE MAY DIE AFTER ACCIDENT IN N. Y. SUBWAY

Over Hundred Injured by Poisonous Fumes Created When Control Box Catches Fire.

FIRE EXTINGUISHER BLAMED FOR POISON

Short Circuit Starts Blaze. Passengers Crawl to Safety From Tunnel 75 Feet Deep.

New York, July 6.—(By the Associated Press.)—Trapped in a dark subway tunnel, 75 feet below the street and reeking with gas and smoke, nearly 500 men, women and children passengers on an east side train of the Interboro Rapid Transit company today were converted into a frenzied, shrieking mob, almost a third of whose members were overcome before they could fight their way to safety. Three probably will die. Police officials said it was a miracle many were not trampled to death.

A worse spot for such an accident scarcely could have been picked than Lexington avenue, at Sixtieth street, where the train came to its sudden halt. There is no express station between Grand Central Terminal, at Forty-second street, and Eighty-sixth street. The express tracks are three tiers down, beneath the local tube of the I. R. T. and the crosstown tunnel of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit company, and the only exits are narrow little spiral stairways at Fifty-third, Fifty-eighth and Sixty-third streets. These were jammed with fugitives from the scene below.

A little fire extinguisher, whose contents were turned on a tiny blaze in a motorman's control box, was held responsible by the police for the clouds of poisonous fumes and smoke sent swirling through the tunnel.

Over Hundred Injured.

More than three scores of those overcome required hospital treatment, while the number who were treated on the spot was placed at 100.

The train—a ten car express, heavily loaded was crawling along its subterranean way beneath Lexington avenue shortly after 11 o'clock when passengers in the third coach were startled by an explosion which blew open the door of the driver's apartment. A short circuit had occurred.

Patrolman Fred Norman, who was riding in the car, seized a fire extinguisher from its rack, and, as the train ground to a sudden halt, shot the contents of the extinguisher on the spitting flames, which were eating the insulation from the control box wires. Instead of checking them, he declared, the extinguisher served only to spread them, and in a moment

Charter Revision Committee Favors Annexation of 450 Acres in Oak-land City Territory.

Extension of the corporate boundary lines so as to include a tract comprising approximately 450 acres from Oakland City to the Cascade road was unanimously voted by the charter revision committee of city council Thursday afternoon. Action of the committee will receive definite approval at the next meeting of council, it was stated, in order that it may be added to other charter amendments to be submitted to the legislature within the next few weeks.

The new territory embraced by the city limits commences at a point now included by the present city limits on Waters and Jensen streets, thence west to Beecher street, thence south to a point 200 feet from Cascade avenue, thence southwesterly on a parallel line with Cascade avenue to a point where the land line of lots 151 and 170, connect; thence along Huff street following the meanderings to the Cascade road, then southwesterly to the land lot lines of lots 109 and 120, thence east to the city limits, thence northwesterly and west to the point of beginning.

Fifty Delegates Have Been Named to Represent Savannah and Will be Here This Morning.

OTHER GEORGIA TOWNS WILL BE REPRESENTED

Secretary of State McLendon, Who Will Preside, Confident of Success of Movement.

Several hundred prominent citizens of Georgia will meet in Atlanta at 10 o'clock, Friday morning, on the roof of the Ansley hotel, to adopt permanent plans for holding a great world's fair and maritime exposition in Georgia in 1928. Secretary of State S. G. McLendon will preside as temporary chairman when the meeting begins. Fifty delegates have been named to represent Savannah and announcement was made Thursday by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce that fifty delegates will be present at the meeting to represent Atlanta. Delegations from many other towns and cities in Georgia will attend.

The Savannah delegation left that city Thursday night headed by Mayor Murray Stewart and other prominent citizens. Mills B. Lane, one of the leading bankers of Georgia, is a member of the Savannah delegation and it is reported that he will be named president of the commission of fifty which will be selected at the Atlanta meeting to take full charge of the project and devise plans for permanent organization.

Atlanta Delegates.

Among the delegates named to attend the session from Atlanta are Ivan E. Allen, H. G. Hastings, Sam A. Latham, R. M. Striplin, R. B. Peggam, W. L. Stanley, S. P. Stringfellow, E. B. Black, R. K. Rambo, P. H. Norcross, Captain J. W. English, John K. Ottley and Julian V. Boehm.

The Savannah Board of Trade invited Mayor Key to appoint delegates to represent various activities in Atlanta at the meeting. A similar invitation was sent to the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. It was expected that Mayor Key would return to Atlanta in time to name these delegates but telegraphic information that he would not arrive until Friday evening was received Thursday by Walker T. Lee, secretary to the mayor.

In the absence of Mayor Key Mr. Lee is requesting a number of citizens to serve as delegates to the meeting being named in addition to the list appointed by the chamber of commerce. Nations' League Holds Only Hope Of World Peace Asquith Tells of Failure of World Statesmanship Since Close of War.

BY THE RIGHT HONORABLE
H. H. ASQUITH, M. P.
Former Prime Minister of Great Britain.

(Copyright, 1922, for The Constitution.)
(By arrangement with "John Bull," (Odhams Press, Ltd., London).
London, July 6.—A general survey of the international situation, nearly four years after the conclusion of the armistice, discloses, in many of its aspects, abundant grounds for disillusionment and even despondency. The number of men actually under arms in Europe is stated on his authority to be greater than it was in 1914.

After a long series of abortive conferences culminating for the moment in the fiasco at Genoa, the problem of reparations and indebtedness, which lies at the root of the economic uneasiness of the world, appears to be as far as ever from settlement.

The nations, debtor and creditor, alike, live on from hand to mouth, from quarter day to quarter day, while the exchanges establish new records of feverish fluctuation, and enterprise tosses on the sick-bed of uncertainty.

Statesmanship Found Wanting.

It is not only the cynics who put the question: What has mankind won in return for the unexampled sacrifices, personal and material, of the war?

AMOUNT OF BONDS FOR GOOD ROADS SPLITS SOLONS

Amounts Proposed for Good Roads Ranged from $9,000,000 to $75,000,000.

WOMEN STRESS VALUE OF GOOD ROADS ISSUE

John Holder Not Willing to Name Sum He Believes That the State Should Appropriate.

After three hours of discussion Thursday afternoon the joint senate and house committees on public roads failed to reach an agreement on a definite sum for the proposed good roads bond issue.

Practically all the members were in favor of the bond method of road improvement, and issues were suggested ranging from $9,000,000 to the full $75,000,000 advocated by the Georgia Good Roads association. Several members who said they were for bonds would not commit themselves to any fixed amount.

With but three or four members voting a motion was finally adopted to appoint a subcommittee instructed to draft a bill carrying a bond issue of $25,000,000. Most of the committee had dribbled out of the session and left. A house member raised a protest at undertaking to name the amount for a bond issue without further careful consideration. A motion was then offered to adjourn, subject to call of the chairman and it prevailed. The chairman did not appoint a subcommittee and another early meeting will be called to take up the road bond question again.

John Holder Appears.

The first 30 minutes of the session was taken up in hearing from the general public, then John N. Holder, chairman of the highway board, appeared before the joint bodies for more than an hour.

Mrs. Albert Thornton, of Atlanta, vice president of the Georgia Good Roads association; Mrs. Robert L. Berner, of Macon, chairman of the legislative council of women's state organizations, of Georgia; Mrs. Orin Massey, of Macon, and Mrs. Albert Akers, president of the fifth district women's club, spoke urging the assembly to authorize a large bond issue. Each speaker stressed the value of improved roads as a contributing factor towards the education of Georgia's rural children, declaring that inadequate highways are keeping thousands upon thousands of the state's children from reaching good schools.

A communication was received from the Association of County Commissioners, endorsing an issue of $75,000,000, together with the proposal that the principal and interest be retired with proceeds from sale of motor vehicle license and the gasoline tax.

Before adjourning, the meeting resolved itself into a poll of the members' attitude toward a bond issue and what sum they would favor.

Poll of Members.

The result was as follows: Senator Johnny Jones was for $10,000,000; Senator Bellah, between $6,000,000 and $10,000,000; Senator Thorpe, $40,000,000 to $50,000,000; Senator Campbell, $75,000,000. Representative Holloway, $18,000,000.

Railway Signalmen Not to Join Strike, Is Leader's Promise

ATTEMPT TO GAG TARIFF DEBATE CERTAIN TO FAIL

Senate Gives Up Day to Discussion of Closure Motion, While Tariff Waits.

CLOSURE OPPONENTS FROM BOTH PARTIES

Hoping for Unanimous Consent Agreement to Limit Debate on Some Items, at Least.

Washington, July 6.—Defeat of the republican motion for closure on the administration tariff bill appeared to be virtually certain tonight on the eve of the vote on the issue, set for noon tomorrow.

Democratic leaders claimed, and republican leaders conceded that it would not be possible to obtain for the motion the two-thirds majority necessary to invoke the existing rule, which would limit debate on the bill and its amendments to one hour for each item. Leaders on both sides were hopeful, however, that out of the move would come a unanimous consent agreement for the limiting of debate, at least, on the less important items in the measure. Negotiations looking to such an agreement are under way. If the picture move fails, consideration of the tariff will go steadily ahead. The bill received little consideration today, practically the entire session being devoted to discussion of the closure.

Debate on the closure was enlivened by charges by Senator Harrison, democrat, Mississippi, that Senator Smoot, of Utah, ranking republican on finance committee had written to Major General Crowder, the American government representative in Cuba with a view to inducing the Cuban sugar planters to restrict their production of sugar to 2,500,000 tons a year in return for less duty on sugar than would be imposed unless some such agreement was reached.

To Read Letter.

Senator Smoot denied there was any effort to "put over any deal." He promised to read the letter to the senate when the sugar schedule was taken up and added that when the country found out how the sugar refiners and the New York bankers who had advanced money to Cuban sugar producers had sought to injure the American sugar industry there would be an entirely different sentiment in the senate and in the country toward the domestic industry.

Opposition to the closure move was voiced during the day from the republican as well as the democratic side of the chamber. Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, declared there should be no particular haste in passing the tariff bill when it was considered that there faced the congress a program of "subsidies, gratuities and bonuses" which, he asserted, would add billions of dollars to the burdens now being borne by the country. He referred especially to the soldiers' bonus and the ship subsidy bills.

Second Threatened Extension of Shopmen's Walkout Averted by Labor Board Efforts.

QUICK SETTLEMENT OF STRIKE EXPECTED

Jewell Promises Reply to Chairman Hooper's Conciliatory Letter After Close Study.

Chicago, July 6.—(By the Associated Press.)—A threatened extension of the strike of railway shopmen to include 12,000 signalmen was prevented today by members of the United railroad labor board, when D. W. Helt, head of the Brotherhood of Railroad Signalmen, which has been taking a strike vote, promised to maintain the status quo pending further conferences.

It was the second time that intervention of board members has averted an extension of the walkout, a threatened strike of maintenance of way men having been prevented Tuesday through the efforts of Chairman Ben W. Hooper and W. L. McMenimen, labor member of the board.

Meanwhile railway circles expressed strong hopes of a quick settlement of the shopmen's strike which began July 1. B. M. Jewell, head of the railway employees' department of the American Federation of Labor, who is directing the shopmen's strike, today reiterated former statements that the shopmen were willing to consider a settlement proposition submitted by any authoritative body.

Jewell Pleased.

The situation is improving so far as the strike is concerned, Mr. Jewell said, asserting that "What few men that did remain at work last Saturday and Monday joined the walkout Wednesday."

Mr. Jewell said he had received a telegram from J. F. Valentine, of Cincinnati, head of the international molders union, authorizing a walkout of 2,500 molders employed on railroads. He also exhibited telegrams from heads of the ladies' auxiliaries of the shopmen's organizations in which it was stated that the women were doing picket duty.

Mr. Jewell did not reply today to the letter of Chairman Ben W. Hooper, chairman of the labor board, which was considered conciliatory in some quarters, but said he expected to make reply after studying it closely. Mr. Hooper in his letter advised the shopmen to co-operate with the labor board.

No Actual Figures.

While maintaining that the strike was practically "100 per cent," Mr. Jewell admitted that he had no actual figures. He explained that it was almost impossible to obtain and compare them before another week.

The sixth day of the shopmen's strike was marked by little violence except a few sporadic outbreaks in widely-scattered sections. The railroads maintained that men were returning to work, but some of the carriers annulled some trains and readjusted schedules. The union officials maintained that the ranks of the strikers remained unbroken. E. H. Fitzgerald, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers and Express Employees; D. W. Helt, of the Brotherhood of Railroad Signalmen; Timothy Healy, of the International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen and Oilers, and E. J. Manion, head of the Railroad Telegraphers, called on Mr. Jewell tonight.

Mr. Manion said that the heads of the unions called on Mr. Jewell to offer "facilitations" of the organizations they represented to the shopmen and to "extend any possible aid."

Moral Support.

Mr. Manion said such aid would take the form of moral support, and that the men of the various unions would not do any work regularly performed by the shopmen.

Railroad officials of the Southern Pacific company in San Francisco today claimed that men were returning to the company's shops in Los Angeles in such numbers that 50 per cent were back, while at Tucson, Ariz., 60 per cent of the men were back on the job. The company officials also asserted that the men were running with half the regular force.

CLEAN BILL GIVEN TO STATE AGRICULTURE COLLEGE

accounts. He stated that auditors from the department are now in Athens making their annual examination of the books. He furnished the members of the committee with various bulletins issued by the department, outlined the scope of the work and told of its gradual growth during the time he has served as the head of the extension work.

After Dr. Campbell had made his statement, Rep. sensitive Beckham introduced the resolution approving the work of the state college and the measure was adopted by unanimous vote.

Chairman Kittrell, who presided at the joint session, explained that it was simply the desire of the committee, in calling on Dr. Campbell for a statement, to get all information possible about the work at the state college. A motion thanking Dr. Campbell for appearing before the committee was passed.

Plan to Aid College.
Representative McMichael called attention to the need of the state college in obtaining an additional sum of $182,000 from the state so that the entire $182,000 federal fund could be matched. Mr. McMichael said he favored a diversion of the excess money derived by the fertilizer tax to the use of the state college in matching the federal fund.

"I do not favor additional taxation for this purpose but the fertilizer tax is paid by the farmers and I don't see anything to prevent the use of some of the money derived from this tax to help the state college obtain its full quota of funds under the Smith-Lever act," he said. "This is my own original idea and was not matched by any of my representatives of the college or anybody else."

A committee composed of Representatives Kittrell, McMichael and Beckham was named to consider a plan whereby the fertilizer tax excess can be used by the state college.

Representative Neill's bill adopting the Australian ballot system in Georgia was passed by a vote of 129 to 13. The discussion over the bill lasted more than an hour and several minor amendments were tacked to it. Among those who spoke on the measure were Representative Neill, who called Zack Arnold, of Clay, speaker pro tem, to the speaker's chair; Representative Beck, of Carroll; Representative Davis, of Oglethorpe; Brown, of Emanuel; Hyman, of Washington, and Watkins, of Butts.

The bill will now go to the senate, which passed it last year, for approval of house amendments and then to the governor's desk, and it is expected that he will approve it, as he has endorsed the Australian ballot system in nearly all of his public speeches delivered in the last two years.

Veterans Appear.
The meeting of the house appropriations committee was held in the office of General William A. Wright, only in one session from the Confederate Soldiers' home and members of the board of trustees of the home appeared before the committee to discuss this year's appropriation for that institution.

The confederate veterans asked for continuation of the $40,000 upkeep of the soldiers' home. Their request was given favorable action by the committee.

Mrs. W. H. Felton, of Cartersville, appeared before the committee and said that the present tax system was so bad that it was not going to be tolerated longer by the people of Georgia. She said that there was in her possession proof of the worst sort of tax evasion in the state machinery in her county—Bartow. She recommended that one assessment do for at least five years.

The poor people and the negroes are paying the taxes of Georgia," she said.

WORLD EXPOSITION TO BE PLANNED TODAY

According to present plans a commission composed of fifty of the most prominent citizens of Georgia representing all activities in the state will be named to take charge of the permanent organization work. The commission will serve for one year and next year will be enlarged if necessary.

It is proposed to hold a world's fair and maritime exposition with the whole state of Georgia as the fair ground. The exposition and commercial exposition and the Savannah fair will be devoted to maritime features. All smaller towns and cities in the state will be asked to take part by erecting at least one building to house whatever of the exposition may be allotted to each city.

McLendon Confident.
Secretary of State McLendon, who has been one of the leaders in the movement, expressed the view Thursday that the organization to be perfected Friday will certainly hold a great world's exposition in Georgia in 1925.

"We are going to enlist the support of all the real big men in Georgia in this enterprise," he said. "The time has come for this generation to do something in a big way for this state and the state badly needs something just like this. A great world's fair is the one thing that will pull Georgia out of the rut, and we might as well face the situation, get to work and put Georgia back into the front rank of states, where she belongs."

Secretary McLendon received an outline of what such an exposition will mean to Georgia from E. R. Hannaford, of Savannah, who has been connected in an official capacity with three great world fairs. Mr. Hannaford prepared his outline for submission to the delegates at the meeting Friday.

Outline of Fair's Value.

Following is the statement of Mr. Hannaford:

"The holding of an international exposition in Georgia will be followed by unprecedented prosperity in all lines of endeavor.

"There can be no better subject matter for exploitation and development than an international exposition. Its organization and building methods are unusual to the average business experience but they are vitally interesting features of modern life. Only in one exposition is there possible such a class of comparison and nothing brings together such a vast number of objects and masses for comparison and so many people to compare them."

"Special efforts are now being made by the United States to develop trade with Europe, West Indies, Central and South America, and using its utmost and clearest endeavors to this end by spending millions of dollars.

"Georgia, by its extraordinary topographical situation, will be closer to these countries than any other southern seaport for import and export trade."

"An international exposition in Georgia, at which the products for export and import to and from these foreign countries could be exhibited, would facilitate trade relations and would be one of the greatest factors in the development of the entire south."

Advertise Georgia.
"Such an exposition would provide an opportunity to advertise Georgia on a tremendous scale. The newspapers, magazines and trade publications of the universe would focus the eyes of the world on Georgia; foreign countries, with whom we are endeavoring to promote trade relations, would gladly co-operate in this trade relationship and erect buildings where their products would be displayed; and the states of the union, seeking foreign trade, would similarly erect structures for exhibits; the federal government would make large appropriations for participation."

"At San Francisco in 1915 30 states spent over $5,000,000; 35 foreign nations spent over $7,000,000; the federal government spent over $2,000,000. It is estimated that over 500 manufacturers spent over $800,000,000 in San Francisco. The exposition association made a net profit of $1,312,150.76. The total attendance was 18,413,399. The United States government has appropriated $27,689,912 for the 1915 exposition held in the United States."

"Within a radius of 500 miles of Georgia, according to the 1920 census, there is a population of over 25,000,000 people. Seventy-five per cent of these people can be brought to Georgia for a round trip fare of less than $10. Twenty to twenty-five million people should be attracted to the event from the world at large."

"The exposition will be the cornerstone of Georgia's future development—the show-window of its vast resources."

Stimulate Business.
"It will stimulate all commercial, industrial and agricultural activities; it will increase taxable property after the exposition has passed into history; it will increase Georgia's population and develop the rural sections; it will call extended attention to the many natural advantages of the state; the future tourist traffic will be greatly increased; it will tell in forcible and attractive way the story of climate that has no extremes of heat or cold, and live stock thrive the year around; where adequate rainfall is distributed equitably throughout the four seasons; it will demonstrate in a practical way the products of a three to four-crop country, where the fruits of agriculture can be grown for man and beast every month in the year; it will encourage and develop improvements and processes in the arts, sciences, professions and trades, and aid in the advancement and development of agriculture; the state's future planning will be encouraged and it will be an education to our own people."

"The holding of an event of this magnitude will be the one big impetus to the building of the largest harbor at Savannah, on the southeast coast, and place this great seaport in the front rank of the world's great gateways, and create a market for the products of the entire south and middle west."

"Philadelphia will celebrate the sesquicentennial of the signing of the Declaration of Independence during 1926. Herein lies a great opportunity for Georgia and Philadelphia to get together in a big concerted, co-operative effort. Both expositions can enhance the value to each by encouraging appropriations for both; by inducing nations and states to participate in both events; by encouraging visitors to attend both events; by a systematic co-operation in publicity and exploitation. Prominent and active commissions representing each state and city should be promptly organized to devise ways and means to bring about thorough coordination and co-operation between the two events."

"This is Georgia's opportunity. It has all the requirements necessary, such as natural beauty of sites, transportation, health and comfort conditions, housing and feeding, power and communication facilities. It is a gigantic enterprise of voluntary service. All petty jealousies and rivalries must be subordinated to the one grand idea of making it a success—there must be unity of effort on the part of every citizen of Georgia."

FITZGERALD SENDS DELEGATION TO MEETING.

gave enthusiastic support to maritime exposition project at a meeting this afternoon. I. Gelders, Senator Wiley Williams and Representative T. J. Luke were appointed as a committee to attend meeting in Atlanta Friday.

Savannahs En Route To Exposition Conclave; Delegation Totals Fifty

Savannah, Ga., July 6.—(Special.) A delegation of 50 representative Savannahans left tonight in special Pullmans for Atlanta to attend the state convention called for tomorrow to formulate plans for an all-Georgia exposition in 1925, the center of the fair to be the international maritime show in Savannah.

The delegation is headed by A. W. Morehouse, chairman, and includes among the more notable, Mayor Murray Stewart, D. N. Harris, a member of the Board of Trade; Mills B. Lane, probable president of the proposed exposition, and representatives from all the local commercial bodies.

Calumet Baking Powder and a good plain flour.

Now is the time to pay close attention and see that your bakings are pure, wholesome and nutritious.

Good flour is all flour with the nutritive value of wheat. Mix it with good baking powder and you have a nutritious, wholesome, palatable baking. No ready mixed substitute will take its place.

For wholesome, nourishing food you should use straight flour and a pure baking powder—

There never was, is not, and never will be anything that will take the place of good straight baking powder and plain flour.

If you are using self-rising flour or any other kind of a substitute for good baking powder or plain flour you had better stop, and consider whether you are practicing real economy, or saving money. You are taking a chance of losing the full nutritious health-building value of a good, plain flour.

STRIKERS TO MEET SATURDAY MORNING

With the local strike situation remaining practically unchanged, officials of the six shopcrafts involved in the walkout announced Thursday that a mass meeting of all strikers in this section will be held at the Auditorium Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

Several prominent men will be secured as speakers, according to G. C. Whipple, business agent for the International Association of Mechanics. All ultimatums issued here by railroads were ignored by the strikers, Whipple said. All strikers remained away from their work as far as could be learned.

The N. C. & St. L. shops employed 27 new men Thursday, it was reported. None of the men were strikers, but were experienced in their lines.

Both freight and passenger trains on the Central of Georgia railway are moving without appreciable delay, according to a bulletin received here Thursday from W. A. Winburn, president.

"The heavy holiday traffic was handled on time," he said. "There has been no disorder on the part of Central employees. No effort has been made to replace the striking employees with others, and it is believed that under present arrangements the road can be operated for as long as 60 days without the public being subjected to any interruption of traffic."

Tifton Judge Directs Divorce Case Verdict When Jurors Disagree

Tifton, Ga., July 6.—(Special.)—After being out 24 hours and the foreman deciding that the jury in the case of Mrs. Mary Willis Conger vs. I. Y. Conger could not agree, standing nine to three, Judge Eve declared his opposition in principle to mistrials, and directed a verdict giving a divorce to the plaintiff and removing the disabilities of the defendant.

These points were not contested in the suit, and Judge Eve intimated that the question of alimony might be brought up again, if so desired, in the shape of an application for a new trial. Mrs. Conger was suing for divorce and alimony, having the custody of their three minor children. The husband-defendant elected to conduct his own case, saying he is opposed in principle to employing attorneys in law suits.

Atlanta Bank Buys Athens City Bonds at $18,130 Premium

Athens, Ga., July 6.—(Special.)—The city of Athens bonds, totaling $225,000, and voted last May, were sold at noon today for a handsome price, the issue bringing a premium of $18,130.50, or 17.11 per cent. They were bought by the Trust Company of Georgia with main offices in Atlanta. The sale is considered remarkable in view of the present financial condition. Six companies bid and their offers varied from a few thousand dollars above par to the accepted bid. The First Trust & Savings corporation, Atlanta, bid $271,626; R. W. Courts, an honor graduate of Georgia and assistant secretary and treasurer of the company, was here to present the bid.

Evangelist Says Wife Was Jealous Of Women Converts

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 6.—That his wife used a pair of binoculars to watch him while he was swimming with women and girl workers at the Grand Rapids city rescue mission of which he is superintendent, was the testimony in court here today of Melvin E. Trotter in the separate maintenance suit brought by Mrs. Trotter.

"Our Sunday quarrels invariably were brought about because women in the mission audience came forward after the service to shake hands with me," Trotter testified. "My wife accused these women of coming to worship me, not God."

Letters exchanged between Trotter and his wife were read into the record in superior court yesterday. Trotter was placed on the stand during the reading to identify the correspondence. The letters, according to counsel for Mrs. Trotter, were presented to disprove Trotter's contention that his wife's charges of inconstancy resulted from a disordered mind. The correspondence showed that a reconciliation effected in November, 1920, lasted until Mrs. Trotter appeared before the Grand Rapids rescue mission board in April, 1921, and presented a statement charging that Trotter and his secretary, Miss Florence Moody had admitted to her that Trotter was responsible for Miss Moody's delicate condition.

FEDERAL 'SURPLUS' IS STYLED 'MYTH'

Administration Critics Say Treasury Statement Should in Reality Show Deficit for Year.

Constitution Bureau.

Washington, July 6.—(By Constitution Bureau.)—Referring to a recent statement from officials of the treasury department that a "surplus" of $314,000,000 was recorded for the last fiscal year, critics of the administration in Washington tonight are charging that great liberties were taken with the word "surplus" and that the treasury statement was arranged on the eve of congressional elections for campaign purposes.

Instead of an excess of $314,000,000 as indicated in the statement, critics are charging that the treasury really shows a deficit of over $100,000,000. The critics say that ordinarily the showing might imply great economy and great saving of money by the administration, but an analysis of the report, they assert, will disclose a different view.

Railroad Juggling. Making an examination of the treasury estimates the critics point out that the original estimates called for payment of $300,000,000 to the railroads. Instead of payments the government had a revenue of about $60,000,000, notwithstanding which, it is asserted, the railroads got their money.

Answering the question of how it was done, critics say the railroads merely offered their equipment notes while the government practically ignored them and borrowed money on them for the railroads. This, it is charged, amounts to the same thing in the end—borrowed money—although the government is not the borrower. But the direct borrowing would not have permitted a "surplus." Also, the treasury has suggested that it may not be able to finance the railroads next year so easily and that some of the money which should have been paid in this year will have to be paid next year.

The critics also ask if the government redeemed about $175,000,000 of war savings stamps which were due and which were provided for in the original estimate of expenditure. The answer, it is feared, will be that the government did not. The stamps, it is predicted, were handled by the funding process.

In other words, it is insisted, the showing would be that the government borrowed the money to pay the stamp obligation.

Should Be Deficit. Adding up these few items, the critics say, there should be a showing of $300,000,000 for railroads, and $175,000,000 for war savings stamps or about $525,000,000. Subtracting from that the "surplus" of $314,000,000 would show a deficit of more than $100,000,000 for the year.

All of which proves that an expenditure may mean anything or nothing, and that government statements about deficits or a surplus may also mean nothing, according to the critics. Brigadier General Charles G. Dawes, former chief budget officer, expressed about the same thought in his suggestion that money borrowed for the railroads or farmers should not be regarded as an expenditure or cost to the government.

Admit Successes. The critics admit, however, that Secretary Mellon's aides, who have handled the government financial problems, have worked well under a difficult situation. With reduced revenues, they have kept the government out of the money markets at times when it seemed impossible to accomplish such a result.

Even the oldest of the treasury experts, men who are not affected by political persuasions, insist Mellon and Under-Secretary Gilbert should be given considerable credit for their work, though the showing of a "surplus" really means nothing.

All of this has resulted in the question, "When is a surplus not a surplus?" It might mean one of two things, is the reply going the rounds in capital circles. First, a "surplus" may mean almost anything or may mean nothing when the government handles the money, and second, the answer might also be, "When a campaign begins." To make the records stronger for campaign purposes, it is asserted the treasury announced the "surplus" resulted after the treasury had counted on a deficit of $24,000,000.

Democrats Point Out That Administration Has Dropped "Association of Nations" Plank Since Campaign.

Constitution Bureau, Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, July 6.—(By Constitution Bureau Wire.)—Recent dispatches from London concerning Lord Robert Cecil's latest attempt to devise methods by which the United States would be enabled to join the league of nations in the interest of world disarmament are the subject today of renewed criticism by democratic critics of the Harding administration for the president's neglect of over a year to develop an "association of nations" which he promised as a substitute for the league.

It is being pointed out that although President Harding some time ago declared himself in favor of an international tribunal similar to the league, which he chose to refer to as an association of nations, no steps in that direction have been taken. This is taken to mean in capital circles that the administration has decided to discard the league.

Democratic leaders at the capital have no intentions of making the league a national issue in the coming elections. But they are in the subject to the extent that they are prepared to assert Mr. Harding has failed to keep his pledges by ignoring the promises which he made to the country for an effective substitute of the Versailles instrument. In this connection, some democratic member of the senate is expected to inquire of Senator Lodge at an early date whether the president has forgotten his frequent statements on the subject prior to 1920.

Campaign Plank. Republicans of the senate who bitterly fought the league as presented by former President Wilson did so with the reservation that they favored some modified instrument. In the campaigns following party platforms were drafted to include some plank to that effect, almost all subsequent administration leaders assuming office on that promise.

The pledges were said to have taken their first steps towards redemption during the disarmament parley when President Harding made the open declaration that out of the conference some "association of nations" should arise, and that the international situation demanded such. The program was laid aside during discussion in the senate of the several treaties negotiated; but it was thought that with approval of the treaties abroad, which has been effected by several actions, in some part or in whole, an immediate recurrence of the idea would be pronounced. This, democrats aver, has not taken place among administration leaders, who, it is charged, have permitted the proposal to escape official agitation. Now, however, with the further advances from Europe, as in the case of the efforts of Lord Robert to promote the suggestion, minority members declare they will push the proposition.

Approve Cecil's Effort.

Approval of the Cecil effort to bring about the program suggested has been indicated in wide circles at the capital and at the state department. The plan, it is said, would be something of an universal application of the Monroe doctrine, and would meet the favor of advocates of the league.

Indications at the capital are that James M. Cox, the democratic nominee for the presidency last time, will have a great deal to say on the failure of President Harding's substitute to appear in a year and a half after republican declarations were made. Mr. Cox, who is now in Europe, is to return in time for participation in the November elections and is expected to make a number of speeches against Senator Lodge and other league foes, who, he will charge, blocked the league plan to promote world peace and since have never taken steps towards presenting a substitute plan as was promised in 1920 and again in 1921.

LEADING ATLANTANS SUED BY GOVERNMENT

Joel Hurt, Sr., George F. Hurt, E. Joseph and Clifford L. Anderson were made the defendants in a suit brought Thursday in Fulton superior court by the United States government in an effort to recover $283,500, as an outgrowth of a war contract with the defunct Pratt Engineering and Machine company.

The suit set out that the defendants at the time of the letting of the contract in question were officers and directors of the Pratt concern, which went into bankruptcy August 4, 1921, and that the company made no effort to settle its alleged indebtedness to the government. Luther Z. Rosser, Sr., brought the suit for the government as special counsel for the United States.

During the war the government let the building of a picnic acid plant at Little Rock, Ark., to the E. J. Davis Chemical company, of Delaware, and this company sublet the contract to the Pratt company, the suit alleges. The government also alleges that it advanced to the Pratt company the sum of $283,500, which was never accounted for.

The government charges that the Pratt company had fraudulently and negligently permitted the government funds to be mingled with the company's funds in paying off the company's indebtedness.

Plans Are Laid To Break Senate Filibuster Today

Floor Leaders Are Chosen and Line of Strategy Is Marked Out.

Plans to break up the senate filibuster, began Thursday morning by opponents of the bill to repeal the tax equalization law, were laid at a caucus of friends of the bill held Thursday afternoon.

Floor leaders were chosen and a line of strategy was mapped out to stem the tactics of delay by anti-repeal members, and force the issue at an early vote.

A compromise measure to end the filibuster was announced Thursday night by Senators L. C. Brown and James R. Thomas, who said it was their intention to offer this morning an amendment to the repeal bill to reach inevitable property for taxation.

The measure of the two senators is aimed at intangible property, such as notes and bonds, and since it is this class of property both sides profess eagerness to see brought to light, the authors assert that the amendment ought to stop the controversy and avert the suggested passage of an income tax law.

Details of the plans laid at the caucus Thursday afternoon, were kept secret by those participating, but it was learned that they are designed to break the filibuster within two or three days at the most.

On the other hand, leaders of the opposition, declared they could hold out indefinitely or until they could recruit additional strength to defeat the repeal bill.

Read the Journal. The repeal measure had been set as a special and continuing order for Thursday morning. The filibuster showed itself as the session began, when Senator Snow, of the 7th, objected to the usual procedure of dispensing with the journal reading. He carried his point after a long wrangle and it was voted to have the journal read.

Senator Jones, of the 37th, moved for adjournment until Friday morning at 11 o'clock. Senator Brown, of the 50th moved that the senate adjourn until Monday morning at 11 o'clock.

Then began a series of sharp exchanges between the repeal and anti-repeal factions. Senator Nixon, of the 51st, charged the opponents of the bill with holding a caucus Wednesday night for the purpose of setting the stage for the filibuster.

Opponents Going Strong. For three hours the bill's opponents held the floor and were going strong when the hour of adjournment arrived. Senator Fleming, of the 8th, was engaged in the task, which he had started an hour earlier, of reading verbatim all the bills set down on the calendar for consideration—eight in number. He had finished two bills.

Senator Fleming was fighting adjournment until Monday and said his

FORD WOULD LEASE PART OF L. & N.

Detroit, July 6.—(By The Associated Press.)—Henry Ford has offered to lease that part of the Louisville and Nashville railroad extending between Banner Fork and Corbin, Ky., and from Corbin to Cincinnati, and operate it with the present force of railway employees "in order that coal may be moved to Detroit." It became known Mr. Ford made the offer to the president of the Louisville and Nashville after the railroad company had informed him it was unable to move 8,000 cars of coal consigned to Detroit industries because of labor troubles.

The Banner Fork branch is the coal carrying division of the railroad. Mr. Ford's offer included the taking over of the railroad's equipment on this branch under the proposed lease.

ARMY FLYER KILLED WHEN PLANE CRASHES

Detroit, July 6.—Captain George C. Tinsley, age 27, of the army aviation corps, and an overseas veteran, was killed at Selfridge field, Mount Clemens, near here, late today when his plane crashed to the ground from a height of 150 feet, and burst into flames. His mother, Mrs. Jeannette Tinsley, of Richmond, Va., survives.

Witnesses said Captain Tinsley had turned sharply when the motor went dead and the plane dropped, bursting into flames as it hit the ground. Captain Tinsley had been badly burned and there was a hole in his chest, that apparently had been made by a sharp piece of wreckage.

MISSION CHAPELS LOOTED IN MUTINY OF CHINA TROOPS

Shanghai, China, July 6.—(By The Associated Press.)—Three Methodist mission chapels, between Changshui and Kianfu, Province of Kiangsi, were looted and destroyed during the recent mutiny of troops in that province, according to advices received from Nanchang, capital of Kiangsi. One native pastor is reported missing. No foreign missionaries were stationed at these places.

Cholera has broken out among the troops involved in the recent Kiangsi mutiny, it was said in the Nanchang advices, and the Methodist missions are co-operating to prevent an epidemic. The soldiers who are responsible for the disorders were under the command of General Tsai Chen Huan, who was blocking the advance toward

TWO ARE INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

Police late Thursday night had been unable to apprehend the driver of the heavy motor truck that early yesterday morning struck Marion Furse, Jr., 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Furse, 1814 Peachtree road, knocking him off of his bicycle and badly mashing his left foot.

Young Furse was carried to the Grady hospital where an x-ray examination showed that the bone was badly crushed, and it was feared that amputation might prove imperative. It is claimed that the rear wheel of the truck passed over the left foot.

The accident happened nearly in front of the boy's home, and, police were told, the driver of the machine did not stop after hitting him.

The license tag number was obtained by several parties who witnessed the accident and it is believed the driver will be placed under arrest during Friday.

Another automobile accident reported to the police Thursday was the injury last Tuesday of Mrs. J. A. Camp, who lives near Lakewood, who was struck near her home by an automobile said to have been driven by A. Benner, of 472 Whitehall street. Mrs. Camp was carried to her home for medical treatment, and it was reported Thursday that she was in a serious condition.

Passing motorists who witnessed the accident, according to the police report, chased Benner to town, overtaking him and having him arrested under charges of reckless driving. He was released under a $500 bond.

The preliminary hearing of I. A. Sellers, 56, under charge of murder in connection with the fatal cutting last Tuesday night of W. E. Strickland, was postponed by Recorder George E. Johnson Thursday afternoon at the request of Attorney Fred B. Harrison, who is representing Sellers, and who desired more time in which to prepare his defense.

Strickland died as the result of half wounds received during a fight at the residence of his brother, J. W. Strickland, 85 East Hunter street. The trouble is said to have originated over the payment for whisky Sellers is said to have bought from J. W. and Mrs. Strickland.

The dead man is survived by his widow and three daughters, Mildred, Josephine and Marjorie Strickland; son, George Strickland; his father, B. M. T. Strickland, and five sisters and two brothers.

DONALDSON SAYS DEMAND IS FINE FOR PENN. TIRES

Donaldson Tire Service, 345 Peachtree street, dealers for Pennsylvania and other makes of automobile tires and tubes, stated Thursday that the response to the recent reduction in the price of Pennsylvania tires was greater than he had anticipated.

This company has handled a large volume of Pennsylvania tires and tubes during the past several months, as well as other makes. Through an error the name of the dealer was omitted in connection with the price reduction announcement made by the Pennsylvania factory in The Constitution Thursday morning, but he has become so well-known as dealer for this line that the announcement brought a good number of customers during the day.

Dowse B. Donaldson, proprietor of this company, states that there has been no three-months period during the period of depression, which has not shown an increase over any previous similar period in the several years he has been in the tire business.

The Little Red Foot

BY ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

Next Week, "False Faces"
By Hugh Kahler

Snowballs and Kisses.
Snow came as it comes to us in the northland—a blinding fall, heavy and monotonous—and in forty-eight hours the Johnston road was blocked.

Followed a day of dazzling sunshine and intense cold, which set our timbers cracking; and the snow, like finest flour, crinkled under our snowshoes.

All the universe had turned to blue and silver.

Summer House was covered to the veranda eaves. We made shovels and cleared the roofs and broke paths to stable and well.

Nick made a snowball and flung it at me, but I dodged it. Then Penelope made another and aimed it at me so truly that the soft lump covered my cap and shoulders with snow.

But her quick peep of laughter was checked when I sprang up to chastise her, and she fled on her pattern, but I caught her around the corner of the house under the lilacs.

"You should be trounced like any child," said I, holding her with one hand while I scraped off snow from my neck with the other.

At that she bent and flung a handful of snow over me; and I seized her, bent her back, and scrubbed her face till it was pink.

Choked with snow and laughter, we swayed together, breathless, she still defiant and snatching up snow to fling over me.

"You little minx!" said I, when I had spat out a mouthful of snow, "is not anyone free to trounce a child?"

At that I slipped, she tripped me; into a drift I went, and she pounced on me and sat astride with a cry of triumph.

"Now," says she, "I shall take your scalp, my fine friend," and twisted one hand in my hair.

"Hui-u! Kou-ee!" she cried, "a scalp taken means war to the end! Do you cry me mercy, John Droque?"

I struggled, but the snow was soft and I sank the deeper, and could not unsheat her.

"Do you yield to me, John Droque?" "No," I said, "do you mean to drown me, you vixen?"

"You engage not to seek revenge?" "I do so."

"Why?" Because you love me tenderly?" "Yes," said I, half choked, "let me up, you plague of Egypt!"

"That is not a vain speech, John Droque. Do you love me or not?" "Yes, I do—you little—"

"Object of my heart's desire!" I fairly yelled. "I am like to smother here!"

"This is All Fool's Day," says she, sick with laughter to see me mad and at her mercy. Therefore, you must tell me lies, not truths. Tell me a pretty lie, quickly—else I scrub your features!"

After a helpless heave or two I lay still.

"You say you love me tenderly. That is a lie, John Droque—it being All Fool's Day. So you shall vow, instead, that you hate me. Come, then!"

"I hate you!" said I, licking the snow from my lips.

"Passionately?"

Then, looking down at me, a bluish now, yet laughing, she bent her head slowly, very slowly to mine and rested her lips on mine.

Then she was up and off like a young tree-limb, flinging and tumbling on her pattern; but, like a white hare, I lay very still in my form, unstirring, gazing up into the bluest, softest sky that my dazzled eyes ever had closed upon.

There was a faint fragrance in the air. It may have been arbutus—or the trace of her lips on mine.

And so came spring upon us in the Northland that fateful year of '77 with blue skies and melting snow and the cock's clarion sounding clear.

But it was mid-April before the first Forest Runner, with pelts, passed through the Sacandaga.

And then, for the first, we learned something concerning the great war that was raging everywhere around our outer borders—how His Excellency had surprised the Hessians at Trenton, and had tricked Cornwallis and beat up the enemy at Princeton.

It was amazing to realize that His Excellency with only the frozen fragments of a mangled and defeated army, had recovered all the Jerseys. But this was so, thank God; and we wondered to hear of it.

All this the Forest Runner told us as he ate and drank in the kitchen.

And to make this more certain, there was now gathering in the west an army under Butler and Brant, to strike the Mohawk Valley, sweep through it to Schenectady, and there come in touch with Burgoyne.

To oppose this terrible invasion from three directions, we had the Hudson and a few troops; but His Excellency was engaged south of these points and must remain there.

We had, at Ty, a skeleton army, and gates to lead it, with which to hawk Valley, to block the west and face Burgoyne. We had, in the Mohawk, a bold front to Brant and Butler only fragments of Van Schaick's and Livingston's Continental line, now digging breastworks at Stanwix, a company at Johnston, and at a crisis, our Tryon County militia, now drilling under Herkimer.

And, save for a handful of Rangers and Oneidas, these were all we had in Tryon to resist the hordes that were gathering to march on us from north, west and south—British regulars with horse, foot, and magnificent artillery; partisans and loyalists numbering 1,200; a thousand savages in their paint; Highlanders, Canadians, Hessians; Sir John Johnson's regiment of Royal Greens; Colonel John Butler's regiment of Rangers; McDonald's renegades and painted Tories—God! what a murderous horde; and all to make their common trust here in County Tryon!

Our grim, rank Forest Runner sprawled on the settle by the kitchen table, smoking his bitter Indian tobacco and drinking.

It was, I think, an hour later when Nick comes a-running to find me.

"A fire at Fish House," he cries, "and a dense smoke mounting to the sky!"

"Pack up and be ready to leave!" said I. And, to Nick: "Saddle Kaya and be ready to take Penelope a-horse to Augusta blockhouse. Cut my Indian!"

As I belted my shirt and stood ready, Mr. Saguway came swiftly, training his rifle.

"Come," said I, "we must learn why that smoke towers yonder to the sky."

Penelope took me by the sleeve: "Do nothing, rush John Droque," she said in a breathless way.

"Get you ready for flight," said I. "Pack up, Penelope!" shouted Nick, reading Kaya into the ocarina, the roucoules, and into making up his pack on the grass.

"At Mayfield fort!" I called across to Nick. "And if I be not there to night, then take Penelope to Johnston, for it means that the Indians are on the Sacandaga!"

"Farewell, Penelope," I said. "You shall be safe with Nick."

"Safe in the forest, always, and the devil himself could not catch me," said I cleverly.

She stretched out her hand. I took it, looked at her, then kissed her fingers. And so went away swiftly.

Fire and Fear.
Presently, through the trees, I saw Fish House on a fire.

I did not see a living creature near, but farther toward the east clearing I heard voices and the sound of pucks and axes, and my Saguway and I crept thither along the bank of the wooded hollow.

It was a war party, and it had accomplished a clean job at Fish House, and now they all were coming down to the blood-bolled hollow and looking across it where lay the short route west to Summer House.

I touched yellow leaf on the arm, and we wriggled backward out of sight. Then, rising, we turned and pulled foot for our canoe.

Now my chiefest anxiety was whether Penelope and Nick had got clean away and were already well on the road to the Mayfield Block House.

It was not yet full dark when, over my shoulder, I saw a faint rose light in the north. Summer House was all afire, and the internal light touched us even here, maintaining our features and the paddle-blades, and staining the dark water with a prophecy of blood.

It was long past midnight when I hailed the picket at the mill and drove our canoe toward into the light of a lifted lantern.

"Is Nick Stoner in?" I called out. "All safe," replied somebody on shore.

Even as he spoke, I saw Nick come up the road with a torch, and called out to him.

"Where have you been, John Droque?" said he, coming to me and laying a hand on my shoulder.

"Is Penelope safe?" I asked. "She is as safe as any here in Mayfield. As is Summer House that burns in the north, or only the marsh here."

"The whole place is a fire," said I. "A dozen green coats, blue-eyed Indians, and two real ones, burnt Fish House."

After a silence I said: "Who commands here? I think we ought to move toward Johnston this night. I don't know how many green-coats have come to the Sacandaga, but it must have been another detachment that is burning Fonda's Bush."

As I spoke a Continental captain followed by a lieutenant came up in the twilight, and I gave him his salute and returned an account of what had happened on the Drowned Lands.

He seemed deeply disturbed but told me he had orders to defend the Mayfield Fort. He added, however, that if I must report at Johnston, he would give me a squad of musketeers as escort thither.

"Yes, sir," said I, "my report should not be delayed. But I have Nick Stoner and an Indian, and apprehend no danger."

I told Penelope that we must travel this night to Johnston, it being my duty to give an account of what had happened without delay.

"There can be no danger to us on the road," said I, "but the thought of leaving you here in this fort disturbs me."

"What would I do here alone?" she asked. "What will you do alone in Johnston?" I inquired in turn.

At the same time I realized that we both were utterly homeless, and that in Johnston our shelter must be a tavern, or, if danger threatened, the fortified jail called Johnston Fort.

"You will not abandon me, will you, sir?" she asked, touching my sleeve with the pretty confidence of a child.

"Why, no," said I. "We can lodge at Jimmy Burke's tavern. And there is Nick to give us countenance—and a most respectable Indian."

"Is it so dangerous for me to go thither in your company?"

"What else is there for us to do?" Then I helped Penelope into the wagon, got in myself and took the reins. Nick and the Saguway vaulted into the box and lay down on our pile of furs and blankets.

And so we drove out of the stockade and onto the Johnston road, Penelope on my left, and the Saguway on my right, and her hands clasped around my left arm.

Are you a child?" I asked. "I do not know what ails me," she murmured, "but—the world is so vast and dark. . . . and God is so far—so far—"

Burke's Tavern.
Now, whether it was the wetting I got on Mayfield creek and the child I took on the long night's journey to Johnston, or if my thigh-wound became inflamed from that day's exertion at Fish House, Summer House, and Mayfield, I do not know for certain.

But when at sunrise we drove up to Jimmy Burke's tavern in Johnston, I discovered that I could not move my right leg, and, to my mortification, Nick and my Indian were forced to make a swinging chair of their linked hands, and carry me into the tavern. Penelope following forlornly, her arms full of furs and blankets.

Jimmy Burke was excited. "Yes, it is true. Fish House, Summer House, and Fonda's Bush are in ashes. Jimmy, and your late friend, Sir John, is at Buck Island with a thousand Indians, regulars, and Tories, and like to pay us a call before planting time.

"Oh, my God," says Burke, "the devil take Sir John and the black heart of him as he comes back here to murder his old neighbors!"

That was the report I wrote and instantly—"Will you kiss me out of that charity which you say you practice?"

"That is not charity—"

"What is begged for is charity." "I do not favor charity," said Penelope. "That is why even though I be a Grant-Forbes of Northesk and and stupid—and there was blood on him and on me. . . . And my kerchief was torn off and my hair all tangled. . . . I beat him till he dropped my door key, and so unlocked my door and returned again to him, silent and flaming, and drove him with blows out of my chamber and out

"Oh, John Droque—John Droque," said Penelope in her strange and wistful way. "you shall hear the clear summons on your door very soon—all too soon for one of us,—for one of us, John Droque."

"Did I not once force a battle in the North? And men in strange uniforms?"

"Yes," said I, smiling away the disappointment of a vague and momentary hope.

"I think that battle will happen very soon," she said gravely.

After a little silence she turned to go; and I followed, scarce knowing why; and took her hand in the door way.

"Little prophetic," said I, "who promises me what my heart desires, will you touch your lips to mine as a pledge that your prophecy shall come true?"

That night I had a fever; and my leg remained swollen and red, and the pain was such that I could not bear the weight of a linen sheet, and Nick made a frame for my bed-covers, like a tent, so that they should not touch

Dr. Younglove came from the Flatts, who was surgeon in General Herkimer's brigade of militia.

He concluded, there was naught to do save that I must lie on my back until my trouble departed of its own accord; but he could not say how soon.

Penelope had the chamber next to mine; Nick slept in the little bedroom on my left; and the Saguway hunted the kitchen, with a perpetual appetite never damaged by gorging.

A Maid's Confidence.
Penelope was my good nurse again. One day I turned me on my pillow and sighed heavily.

"John," she inquired in gentle anxiety, "are you in great pain?"

"She came to me again and laid her cool, soft hand on my head; and I caught it in both of mine and drew her down to me."

"I am a cripple and a beggar for your kindness, Penelope," I said. "I ask a kiss of you. Will you kiss me?"

"Oh," she exclaimed, "you have deceived me! Let me go! Loose me of the house—all over blood as he was, and stupid and drunk. . . . His negro man got him on his horse and rode off, holding him on.

"And none know, save Sir John and you and I."

After a silence I said in a controlled voice: "If Sir John comes this way I shall hope not to miss him."

Every day brought rumors or positive news of disasters in our immediate neighborhood. We knew that Sir John, Walter Butler, and Brant had left Buck Island and that Burgoyne was directing the campaign planned for the most hated army that ever invaded the Northland. And we learned the horrid details of these movements from Thomas Spencer, the Oneida who had just come in from that region, and whose certain account of how matters were swiftly coming to a crisis at last seemed to galvanize our people into action.

I was now well enough to take the field with a scout, and I applied for active duty and was promised it; but no orders came, and I haunted the Johnston Fort impatiently, certain that every man who rode express and who went galloping through the town must bring my marching orders.

"Opportunity," I repeated eagerly, "where is she?—for I have not seen or heard of that soft-footed jade once, they say, comes a knocking once in a life-time;—and thereafter knocks at our door no more."

Side Talks[®] by Ruth Cameron

FLASHLIGHT COMMENTS

How our tastes do change as the years fly by!

Is there anything more interesting than looking back down a vista memory lined with household gods we once worshipped and now are ashamed of?

People who have an attic of many years standing can look down this vista with the physical eye by going up into their eaves. But an attic stored with the accumulations of 40 or 50 years is not such a common possession as it used to be. I suppose there are millions of children today who never played in one, never dressed up in clothes from some old chest, never dragged out big bundles of old St. Nicholas or Harpers Young People from the nearer of the eaves, or looked longingly into the forbidden far reaches of them with the feeling that any number of wonderful treasures were surely hidden there.

A Japanese Flame Bush. But a Japanese flame bush, instead of an attic, was the agency that turned my eyes down the vista of household gods forsown.

I saw such a bush in the full glory of its stiff, scarlet blooms in an artistic garden and realized for the first time how beautiful a flower it is. And yet we had a Japanese flame bush in our garden when I was a child and I hated it, because it would look stiff, and because it would not make good bouquets for the house, which, at that time was my idea of the sole mission of a garden. I have other ideas now.

That Dreadful Lamp Shade!

I also have other ideas about a certain lamp shade we bought in those days. It was wonderful yellow globe with Chinese dragons in gilt on it, and we bought it to go on an old fashioned lamp which should have had a simple little spreading shade. Fancy! For some years we regarded it as the one artistic and attractive bit in an old-fashioned parlor. Then we began to have doubts which carried it into a less conspicuous place. Finally it disappeared altogether from the haunts of the living.

A Nubian girl's head is another of the sign posts on my progress toward better taste (I hope). I wonder how many homes contain such a sign post.

And the poster period! Somewhere, I don't know just where, there is a collection of posters that were "stripped off my wall when my ideas of decoration changed. I should have burned them up then and there but many of them were such hard won trophies of a chase which at the time seemed all important that I could not quite commit that sacrifice.

The Rogers Group. Out in the barn of a little Inn where I stayed a few days lately I found two bits of flotsam and jetsam that indexed the taste of 40 years ago as nothing else could. Two Rogers groups! I suppose to some of my readers that will mean nothing. But if they will ask their fathers and mothers they will doubtless be able to tell them what a mark of gentility and taste the Rogers group once were. No better class home was ever without at least one. And today they are hidden in the barn behind the old buggy and the tool chest!

As you look down the vistas of the household gods you have set up so painstakingly, worshipping so fervently, discarded so completely, I wonder what you see.

AT WOMAN'S WINDOW

BY W. L. GEORGE

It used to be the fashion in "polite families" to compel their wretched girls to play the piano, to sing and to paint in water colors. As time went on we came to realize that it was a pity to have our ears continually offended and be confronted on every wall with the most horrible daubs. So girls were let alone, except that in each family we found "the musical one," "the artistic one," etc. Then at last we burst into modern liberty, and now only the girl who chooses writes poetry or plays the violin.

That is well, but it has led us into a different kind of trouble. In many cases, instead of having to force the girl to play the piano we find we can't stop her. On the slightest provocation she sits down and administers an hour of Mosowsky, Tschalkovsky and Everything. Or if she paints she considers it an outrage if her works are hung in the bathroom by a father who finds that he must hang them somewhere. A girl who feels brewing within her the impulse to produce works of art, should not obtrude these works upon a reluctant family unless she is convinced that indeed they are works of art. The capacity to paint, to write, is akin to mushrooms; it should be nursed in the dark. The best thing a girl can do is to pursue the form of art she has chosen by herself, without criticism, without help. She does not need the expert until she is far advanced; if she goes too early to the drawing school she will kill her originality. Likewise, if too early she invites the criticism of her family, she will obtain it so favorable that her ambition will be destroyed. Keep your own counsel and follow your own road is the best advice to give to a woman artist.

All colors may be grouped in three classes—warm colors, cool colors and natural colors. Here we are concerned with the first class, warm colors.

There are three so-called primary colors—red, yellow and blue. All other colors are derived from combinations of these colors in different proportions. Thus red and yellow combined in equal quantities produce orange;

Owner in Room, Burglar Steals Valuable Jewels

A burglar early Thursday morning stole quietly into the bedroom of Mrs. A. Tankersly, 231 West Peachtree street, while Miss Lee Cooper and a friend were standing in the front room immediately adjoining the one occupied by Mrs. Tankersly, and took from the dresser and bureau drawers every article of jewelry in the room. The jewelry is estimated by Mrs. Tankersly to be worth between $1,500 and $2,000 and consisted of a costly string of pearls, a set of diamond earrings, a ladies' gold locket set with diamonds and two gold rings.

The burglary was at first investigated by Call Officers Otis Hewell, Walter McWilliams and John D. Woods, who found that entrance and exit was made through a rear window. Detectives L. E. Carter and Bullard were detailed to investigate the matter further.

Mrs. Tankersly told officers that immediately after she had gone to bed, she heard a noise near the dresser, but thought it probably was a mouse or that the noise came from outside.

This continued for some minutes, and when she heard the opening of the bureau drawers, she called to Miss Cooper.

The robber then made a hurried exit, passing through a swinging door, through the kitchen, and out of the window into the yard.

Famous $50,000 Pullman Car Damage Case Fails Of Verdict Third Time

Savannah, Ga., July 6.—(Special.) For third time, a mistrial was declared today in the case of Miss Alice Fretwell, of Atlanta, against the Central Georgia railroad. Miss Fretwell is suing for $50,000, for damages, alleging that while a passenger on a sleeping car of the road, another passenger violently intruded himself into her berth. She alleges negligence on the part of the railroad in not affording proper protection.

A feature of the first two mistrials was the question of the competency of jurors who were Masons, it being declared that in her trouble on the train she was aided and protected by a Savannah member of the order who learned she was the daughter of a Mason.

SAVANNAH HAS FINE DISTANCE SWIMMER

Savannah, Ga., July 6.—(Special.) Sporting circles in Savannah today discussed the question of organizing an association to enter a local swimming champion, Eugene (better known as "Chief") Bonard, first mate in the local Red Cross life saving corps, and the swimming trip across the English channel, a feat attempted by scores, but accomplished by only two swimmers to date. The talk is occasioned by a record made yesterday afternoon by Bonard, who swam from Warsaw to the Isle of Hope, slightly more than 60 miles, in 6 hours and 45 minutes.

The distance across the English channel is 28 miles. Bonard finished in fine physical condition, apparently as fresh as when he went aboard the boat that took the party out to Warsaw. He has a number of water records to his credit.

It is not possible to persuade women to disconnect sports and plaid skirts, so the combination goes merrily on through the hot weather. Short jackets are now substituted for sweaters.

Ever since the first Scotchman appeared in his tartans, bright plaid fabric has been desirable for outdoor costume. It must have taken a long time for this design to drift across the Atlantic, because we were not born when the Scots were, nor did we play golf until hundreds of years after they had perfected the game. Yet, somehow, at some time, the two things linked up together.

The American woman got the idea of plaid and sports into her head as an admirable combination. No whimsicality of fashion has broken this connecting link. Wherever there are of importance. The Americans like to have sport on their jackets and skirts. The sufferer from the weather might argue that it is a strange way to keep cool, to add a cape to a coat in July, but the answer is that when it is worn no one is trying to keep cool.

It is worth while to own a hatbox—a large square leather one that will accommodate four hats pinned to the cushions on the inside of each side. A case of this sort proves useful many times beside as a hatbox. It makes an excellent week-end box, as it can be used for any sort of articles. However, when used for hats it is best not to put anything else in it save the hats.

Now if you do not own a hatbox and do not want to invest in one you will find that a pasteboard hatbox of firm construction will carry hats quite well. If you want you can put two hats in a large pasteboard box, filling in the spaces between lightly with freshly crushed tissue paper, and then send this on to your destination by parcel post a few days before you depart. Or you can simply take the box as part of your hand luggage, getting porters to carry it along when changes are necessary.

An experienced packer says that when traveling only with hand luggage the best place for a waterproof or blanket coat is outside the suitcase. "It should be folded neatly, wrong side out, and fastened to the case with straps."

Another problem that sometimes presents itself when you are living in a trunk or suitcase, is the objection of packing clean clothes with soiled ones. If you travel with a single box you may feel that it is necessary to put soiled and clean clothes together. A good plan is to send all soiled clothes home in a separate box by parcel post. Any strong canvas bag properly secured and tagged will do even better.

Little Theater Guild Gives Four One-Act Playlets on Thursday

The Little Theater Guild will present next Thursday evening, at Cable hall, four delightful one-act plays, which have been in preparation for the past few weeks.

The plays are "The End of Summer," and "The Chance of a Lifetime," by Parker Hord, a member of the guild and a most talented and versatile playwright. "The End of Summer" is a one-act play, and "The Chance of a Lifetime" is a two-act play, both by Parker Hord.

Once upon a time worsted plaid was the conventional costume of children, but woolen cloths went out the door when hygiene came in at the window. Mothers do consent to dress their children in silk and crepe de chine this summer, but they care nothing whatever for worsted. They take their Scotch plaid in cotton, not in wool.

Plaid skirts for women were ousted by solid colored homespun ones. These were the days when sweaters were worn for the house as well as for sports. Then along came the little short jacket, launched at the Paris races, taking the place of the universal sweater to a certain degree; not entirely, of course, for women will not be persuaded to relinquish entirely the garment which they borrowed from college athletes.

Yet the short jacket has done fairly well. It is worn on the country club porches as it is on a shopping tour, and with it often goes the plaid skirt.

The sketch shows a costume which is borrowed from the national Scottish costume. Its skirt is longer than kilts and not quite so killy. The plaid is of green beige, the jacket is green, and the circular cape that hangs from the shoulders is plaid and held by two bands of the material, running to the belt.

It is a smart costume, this, and it is much better than the sport skirt and not quite so killy. The plaid is of green beige, the jacket is green, and the circular cape that hangs from the shoulders is plaid and held by two bands of the material, running to the belt.

Additional light was thrown on the circumstances surrounding the purported confession of Henry Sharp of the murder of Ed Kerner, 38 years ago, at Hottentot, Texas, for which A. L. George served a prison term, in a letter received yesterday from A. H. Sears, 271 Luckie street.

Sears says he knew George, who served more than five years in the state prison of Texas. He was pardoned in 1900, after a dying man had made a confession and is living in Winston-Salem, N. C., "preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ and telling of his awful experiences in the Texas prison and of the crime he did not commit."

A letter also was received in Atlanta Thursday from a man in Austin, Texas. This letter agrees with the Sears letter, except it states George died in that city about a year ago after making an unsuccessful effort to have the Texas legislature "clear his name."

R. T. Byrd told a Constitution reporter that according to his memory, Henry Sharp, the confessed slayer, died in California. The confession, found in a machine drawer by a woman living on Jones avenue, is dated Hottentot, Texas, January 20, 1900. The killing, the confession states, took place October 1, 1884.

Who's Who in the Story.

Diana Langley, who possesses a superlative degree of quality of "pure" blood, is at birth by her youthful aunt, Marjorie Langley, herself a noted beauty, to whom Stephen Dale, a wealthy bachelor, has been devoted for years. Impetuously declares her love for Dale, and on being told by him that he can never marry because of a trace of insanity, in his family, to soothe her pride, elopes with him and marries him. A young naval officer, at the same time that Ted Saunders, a hospital attendant, who is a friend of Diana's, marries Sylvia Bennett, a friend of Diana's, and who is a friend of Diana's. On her way to California with her husband, Diana meets Lynn Johnston, an old acquaintance, and with him is acquainted with a friend of the limited pulls out of a New Mexican town. They are picked up by a Spaniard named Dominguez, who makes Johnston, whom Diana adopts as a fiancé for property's sake, a prisoner, and tries to force a worse adventure. In her second escape, she is badly hurt, but is rescued by Dr. Alexander Borden, a former noted New York physician, who, with his sister, Cynthia Borden, are people with a mysterious past in which tale and his dead uncle are somewhat concerned. Borden falls in love with Diana, who is determined not to return to Alex. Dominguez is also persistent and Dale, who finally finds her, steps into a situation to her irresistible charm. Under the circumstances, Dale finds it wisest to marry her.

INSTALLMENT NO. 59.

The departure.
Diana opened her eyes next morning and sat up in bed startled by the gloom of the room.

She had been accustomed to waking in a flood of brilliant sunlight which poured in from Cynthia Borden's gay little garden.

The sight of the window, closed and barred, brought back in a flood the memory of the previous night's adventure. The night before, she had been shot by a revolver shot—Dr. Borden's instant decision to go to San Francisco.

In a flash she remembered also her half promise to Cynthia Borden that the doctor's suit would be successful.

She was suddenly terribly afraid of that promise.

Already she could hear Cynthia moving about in the kitchen, so she rose and dressed herself with hands that shook a little.

Had Cynthia confided in her brother, she wondered, or had she sold her confidence as something sacred between them?

When at last she was ready and there was no possible excuse for remaining in her room, she went down into the sitting room, apprehensively.

But if Dr. Borden had been informed of the possible fulfillment of his desires, he gave no sign. His greeting was as usual, tempered only by concern for her night's rest after the fright occasioned by the mysterious intruder.

He held a little gleaming something out to her in the palm of his hand.

"I believe I was correct in my surmise, Diana. Look at this and see if you have not noticed it before somewhere."

Silent Evidence.
Diana took the bright little object and examined it curiously.

"What is it?"

"A spur, fashioned from silver in a peculiar design, as you will note. I am convinced that I have seen those very spurs on the boots of Pedro Dominguez."

"I do remember now," replied Diana. "I recall that he wore odd spurs the day he called here again. You should waste no sympathy upon him."

"I hate to feel that anyone has to suffer on my account," she said.

A fleeting smile touched the doctor's lips.

"I dare say there have been a good many wounded and dying where you passed. And broken hearts are not responsive to medical aid."

Diana flashed him a smile.

"They all made a good recovery by promptly marrying somebody else," she replied gayly. "Come, Cynthia's calling us to breakfast."

Cynthia Borden, her face flushed with something more than the heat of the stove, was placing a plate of biscuits on the table as they entered. The eyes she raised to them were radiant.

"Why, Cynthia, you're absolutely lovely this morning!" Diana cried involuntarily.

The color deepened in Cynthia's cheeks. There was something freshly youthful about her. She looked like a young girl playing at piety in her dove-colored gown and demure white collar.

This radiance persisted throughout the meal. Diana, watching her without seeming to do so, realized that this was probably the happiest day of Cynthia Borden's life.

The resignation which had quieted the tempestuous heart of youth that beat in the gray-clad bosom was like the crust that formed over a wound. The very thought of escape, of returning to the world of those who really live, had broken through to set the warm blood of youth rioting in her veins.

Diana was a trifle excited herself at the prospect of getting back to white porcelain baths and perfume beauty shops and decollete dinner gowns.

Premotions.
Dr. Borden made little ceremony of closing the house for their departure. His face was a trifle grim as he went from window to window, bolting the shutters.

Diana wondered if he were remembering all too vividly the gaunt specter of the past which had driven him into exile; if perhaps he were regretting the impulse to protect her which was driving him from his retreat.

She noticed that there was no air of finality about his preparations for departure. Did some inner presence

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

About Yeast.

Use lukewarm water when mixing yeast; hot water will destroy the vitality of yeast.

A Fish Hint.

Never put the fish in the kettle and pour boiling water over it, as this will break the skin. Lower the fish into the water.

A Cleaning Apron.

A practical apron for hard cleaning is one made of black oil cloth, made with many pockets into which one can tuck brushes, cloths, etc.

Warm-Up Roast.

The best way to warm up a roast and have it taste like a freshly-cooked one is to wrap it in thickly-greased paper and keep covered while in the oven.

Cherries Are Ripe.

The cherry season is at hand again and cherry desserts are in order. Especially good and pretty to look at is the fresh cherry pie piled high with whipped cream.

Fort Light Housekeeping.

A tin cake-box is such a comfort for the working girl who does a little housekeeping in her room. It will hold bread, cereal, crackers and various little things that must be kept fresh and safe from mice.

A UNIQUE GUIMPE DRESS.

3886. Here is a smart model for the girl who likes "something different." The dress may be joined to the guimpe, or be finished to "slip on" over the guimpe. Jersey cloth or prunella would be good for this style. The sleeve may be in wrist or elbow length. The guimpe may be of pongee or crepe. This is a splendid style for wash fabrics.

The pattern is cut in four sizes: 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. A 10-year size requires 1 3/4 yard of 32-inch material for the guimpe and 3 1/2 yards for the dress.

BEAUTY CHATS

By Edna K. Forbes

BLEACHING THE FINGER NAILS.

Ordinary bleaches to keep the complexion soft and white are rarely of any use for bleaching the nails. Something much stronger is required to remove the stains that the finger nails pick up in such miraculous fashion.

Finger nail bleaches should not be drying, though I am afraid most good bleaches have this advantage. The best one that I know of for general use is lemon juice which is quite a strong bleach but which, though drying, is less so than most ready-made preparations.

If the nails are badly stained cut a lemon in half and rub the juice thoroughly into the fingertips and in under the nails. Then wash off the juice and rub a little cream or vaseline into the cuticle of the nail, so the lemon juice will not dry and harden this delicate skin. But if there are no decided stains such as those which come from fruit, vegetables or ink, use the lemon juice diluted.

The handiest way is to have a small bottle of half lemon juice and half cream always ready in the bathroom cupboard.

A little can be rubbed into the fingers every time the hands are washed if the nails need special attention. Another good idea is to squeeze the juice of one-quarter of a lemon into the bowl of warm, soapy water that you use when manicuring your nails. This makes the water deliciously fragrant and it cleanses stains while the nails are being cared for.

It is not drying used this way because so much cream is rubbed into the nails during the manicuring process.

Just as a hint—when the nails need manicuring and you haven't time to do them, wash them, rub with lemon, dry and polish.

Two Girls—Possibly the reason your pores are enlarged is due to the fact that you do not contract them after the daily cleansing, in which you have distended the pores through the hot water or the cream massage. Always use plenty of cold water or an ice rub, after you have a skin that is so fine there is no chance for a check.

Instead of roughing your hair to build it out, try some of the ventilated forms. They can be tucked under a mass of hair and will not show. Another way is to take an artificial curl and form it into a puff. After this is pinned under the mass it acts the same as a ventilated form and can never be detected. It only adds to the natural hair and it lifts the whole mass from the scalp.

Discouraged—Dark circles around the eyes come from internal causes. Sometimes it is merely sluggishness of the liver, but in many cases it has its origin in a protracted organ which is depressing the nervous system.

How to Save When Shopping

You will find more adulterations used in milk than in almost any other article of diet. The most common method of adulteration is that of skimming or removing part of the cream. This can easily be detected, because its absence decreases the specific gravity of milk. To counterbalance this, water, which is slightly lighter than milk is added in such proportion that the twice-adulterated milk gives the same test as if it had not been tampered with at all. Another adulteration sometimes used is that of adding coloring matter to the milk. This is usually done in order to hide the blueness of the milk, when watered.

Preservatives are often used. Of these, boric acid is probably the least harmful. If milk stands in a warm place for some hours and shows no tendency to sour, you may well be suspicious that it has been treated. Ordinary cooking soda is sometimes added to neutralize the acidity that may be present because of the age of milk. Various acids are also employed to preserve milk, formaldehyde being most frequently used. Some authorities claim, however, that in the small quantities in which it is used in milk, it has no physiological effect. But it is well for you to know, when your milk has had a preservative added.

Mrs. Morrison

Is Honored.

Mrs. Florence Eckford entertained at a lovely bridge-tea Thursday afternoon at her home in the Virginia apartments on Peachtree street, honoring her daughter, Mrs. Joseph Byron Morrison, of Minneapolis, Minn.

Summer blossoms were used in profusion throughout the rooms where sixteen guests played bridge. The prizes were a pair of pearl earrings, and hand-painted bridge score pads. The guest of honor was presented a rhinestone hair ornament.

A number of guests joined the players for tea following the game.

Mrs. Thomas D. Meador, Mrs. Robert Blackburn, Mrs. Burgess, Miss Florence Eckford and Miss Gates Eckford assisted the hostess in entertaining.

Mrs. Morrison was gowned in blue georgette crepe and black silk lace.

Miss Martin Is Honored.

A pretty compliment to Miss Lucy Martin, an attractive bride-elect, of July, was a miscellaneous shower given her Saturday, July 1, by Mrs. Charles L. Ferry at her home on St. Charles avenue.

The lower floor was attractively decorated with vari-colored sweet peas and hydrangeas.

Among those present were Misses Lucy Martin, Ethel Moore, Myrtis Johnson, Evelyn Nixon, Mabel Dudley, Ruth Brock, Mabel Combee, Mrs. Jack Ligon, Mrs. K. J. Watkins, Mrs. L. L. Magruder, Mrs. W. R. Martin, Mrs. Joe Mack, Mrs. Anne R. Combee, Mrs. Lucy E. Pierce, and Mrs. J. A. Moore.

A Friendly Room

Does your living room make friendships?

Does it inspire cosy chats and comforting confidences, and congeniality?

Do your color combinations make for cheer and light and happiness?

Lifelong friendships have been made and wrecked by such trivial things as the color of a rug and the treatment of a window.

So they are NOT trivial things after all!

The influence of the things that surround us is as potent as it is subtle. A man's life consists not in the abundance of the things he possesses nor does the success of your living room depend upon the magnificence of its furnishings. Charm may abide in the simplest cottage and it may elude the most splendid palace.

If your living room is charming it makes and holds friends for you. Does your room lack something?

Our decorator will take pleasure in calling at your home at an hour that will suit your convenience to talk over the needs and possibilities of any room in your house.

FREDDIE BOORDE AND LEW SILVER FIGHT 15-ROUND DRAW

Decision Meets Popular Approval After Grueling Battle Between Youngsters

Two Judges Vote Battle a Draw, While One Votes for Decision for Silver—Bout Even All Through.

BY MIKE THOMAS.

Last night at Ponce de Leon Freddie Boorde and Lew Silver, popular Atlanta featherweights, fought fifteen grueling rounds to a draw. The decision was rendered by three judges, Major A. L. Pendleton, T. J. Williams and Robert H. Martin. The verdict met with the approval of the crowd and they cheered both fighters to the echo. Of course there were dissenting votes from individuals who were admirers of one fighter or the other—but in the main the crowd was pleased.

This fifteen-round battle under the auspices of the American Legion stood out head and shoulders above the fights that have been held locally for years. From this correspondent's viewpoint it was one of the best battles we have seen for a good many years.

The fight started rather tamely but there was a reason for this because neither fighter had ever fought over the fifteen-round route and both were a little leery of the 45 minutes of battling that was before them in the fight lasted. Both fighters were mighty tired when the bell rang for the fifteenth round but both men came out and mixed it to toe and had the crowd on their feet yelling.

In the first round Boorde started through Silver's defence and landed

RICKARD APPLIES FOR LICENSE FOR CLUB

New York, July 6.—Tex Rickard has applied to the Jersey boxing commission for renewal of the license for his club which operates the great bowl on Boyle's thirty acres in Jersey City, intending to hold the Leonard-Tendler lightweight championship fight there on July 27.

Opposition is developing in the usual reform circles in New Jersey and the commissioners will go through the formality of a hearing at which leading ministers will present their objections before granting the license.

Rickard is understood to have confidential assurances—that the license will be issued in plenty of time to enable him to complete arrangements for the battle.

In his midriff with telling strength jarring Lew clear to his toes.

The next round was Silver's. He came out fighting and seemed to have Freddie in trouble. His blows were hard and they landed frequently and in this session Silver opened an old cut over Freddie's right eye.

The next two rounds were even. Both fighters seemed to be tiring rapidly and this punch seemed to lack some of its force. Boorde was repeatedly during these sessions but no telling blows were landed.

The ninth round went to Silver. In this session his admirers thought that he had Boorde in distress, and there yells could be heard from every section of the grand stand. Freddie weathered a storm of blows in this session, but Silver won the round decisively.

The tenth round also went to the Hebrew brawler. He tried hard for a knockout in this session, and landed several blows that had they started earlier in the fight might have floored the pride of Walk Miller's stable.

The eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth were even. Both fighters seemed to be saving themselves, but once in a while one fighter or the other would cut loose a hard punch and drive his opponent back into the ropes.

The fourteenth round went to Silver by a shade on sheer fighting. He gave up trying to box with Freddie, and came out and tried to slug toe to toe with Boorde. At this style of fighting he seemed to have a decided edge, but the old steam was gone from his blows, and they failed to trouble Boorde.

The fifteenth was the best round of the whole fight. The boys stood toe to toe and slugged for a knockout. It seemed to this correspondent that Freddie had a slight edge. He sent Silver to his corner with a badly cut left eye, and had the little Hebrew looking mighty bad. The cut was opened early in the round, and Freddie peeked away on this section until the fight was over. Both of the boys stood up and slugged all through this round—just old straight slugging stuff that every fight fan hopes to see, but seldom sees. Silver was on the aggressive throughout this session, and his continual boring in, even when Boorde's punches were timed to jam him the worst, won the admiration of the entire crowd. He never slowed up throughout the session, and when the bell rang both fighters were battling like mad. There was no decision that would have done both fighters justice, other than a draw.

Boorde Wins One.

The fifth round went to Freddie by a mile. It was the most decisive round of the fight. Boorde rocked Silver with right and left hooks and several of his hardest blows went through Silver's defence and landed

DOUBLES PLAY AT WIMBLEDON

Wimbledon, July 6.—Regarded as one of the strongest combinations in the tournament, Mrs. Molla Mallory and Miss Edith Sigourney, the American stars, astonished another great crowd in the new tennis amphitheater when they lost two straight sets to Mrs. Peacock and Mrs. Lambert Chambers in the women's doubles Thursday. The scores were 6-2, 6-1 and the followers of tennis who had looked for a brilliant victory by the Americans were not only disappointed by their playing but regretful over their failure to survive for further matches. A great many of the experts who have been following the tournament expected this pair to go into the semi-finals.

Mrs. Mallory certainly did not play as well as she has played at other times and Miss Sigourney appeared to be suffering from stage-fright in the presence of the distinguished and admiring throng. The two Englishwomen outplayed their adversaries handily.

The doubles matches were run off on damp courts while the semi-finals of the women's singles were postponed by rain. The first round of the men's singles was also postponed. Webb and Jennings hit well for the locals while Moore was the hitting star for the visitors, he getting the longest hit of the game, a home run.

Langlen Plays Peacock.

In the women's singles Mlle. Suzanne Langlen, of France, will play Mrs. Peacock, who showed such fine skill in the triumph of the British colors over the American in Thursday's doubles. Mrs. Mallory must play Mrs. Beams of England, in the semi-finals of the singles and the contest is expected to be another brilliant combat of the courts for Mrs. Beams has beaten the Norse-American woman twice in English tournaments and has been beaten twice by her.

Mlle. Langlen and Pat O'Hara Wood, of the Australian group, walked away with a mixed doubles match with Miss Betty and G. Sherwood, of England. The winning team next plays Mrs. Mallory and Matthey, an American.

Gerald Patterson, the Australian, finally scored a quick and seemingly easy triumph over Cecil Campbell of England, in the resumption of their match on Wednesday which was interrupted by rain. The score at the cessation of hostilities Wednesday was 7-9, 6-3, 6-2 and one-all on games. Beginning with a rush, Patterson carried the score to 6-1 Thursday and eliminated the Englishman. This sent Patterson into the semi-finals of the men's singles. In the semi-finals, Patterson meets his fellow countryman, J. O. Anderson. Another men's singles triumph for Patterson, the feat of Mavrogorato, of England, by Gilbert, also an Englishman, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, 3-6, 6-2.

In the ladies' doubles, Mlle. Langlen and Miss Edith Sigourney, of California, defeated an English pair, Mrs. Welsh and Mrs. Weston, 6-0, 6-1.

The field in the semi-finals of the men's singles presents Gilbert against Lyett and Anderson against Patterson.

The Preliminaries.

In the opening six-rounder on the card, Battling Nick, the hard-hitting Greek, laid out Sailor Vinson in the second with a volley of blows. Vinson was still groggy when he left the ring. Hollis won a six-round decision over Young Bob Martin in a pretty fight, and in the semi-windup Kid Young and Battling Benson fought the most entertaining six rounds that most of the fans had seen. The decision in this battle was a draw, although Young clearly outclassed his opponent.

THE SOONER OUR champions in golf and tennis realize that these games demand perfect physical condition if best results are to be obtained, and that the price of championships is a careful grooming for important strategic decisions. The sooner our leading exponents play consistently to form.

Dempsey-Wills Meet Saturday

New York, July 6.—Jack Dempsey and Harry Wills are expected to get together Saturday in the local office of Jack Kearns, the champion's manager, and sign articles for their fight, which probably will be held off until next July. The fighters will post $5,000 apiece. It is understood. Later on the two men and their managers will have to go through the ceremony again, bringing Tex Rickard, the promoter, into the agreement.

TITLE BOUTS ON MONDAY

New York, July 6.—There will be plenty of action to take the attention of the fight public next Monday night with two titles in the ring in New York and Philadelphia.

Johnny Britz came back into the game after a long retirement to box Joe Lynch 15 rounds to a decision in New York, and Harry Greb, American light-heavyweight, boxes Tommy Loughran, 8 rounds to no decision in Philadelphia.

AMATEUR BASEBALL

Powder Springs, Ga., July 6.—(Special.)—The fast Powder Springs nine added two more victories to their long string here Tuesday, defeating the Capitol View Ramblers in both ends of a double-header by the scores of 7 to 6 and 8 to 2. The first game, which was played in the morning, was very interesting, up to the fifth inning when the locals bats became effective and six runs was the result. Up until this time only five hits had been made, by the visitors and three by the locals.

The feature of the first game was the pitching of Landrum for the winners and Miller for Capitol View, the latter being relieved in the fifth inning after five runs had been scored off him, due to his teammates inability to field. Adams for the visitors secured five hits out of five trips to the plate in the first game. Baggett for the locals was credited with two doubles and a single out of four times at bat.

The second game was a pitchers' duel for six innings between Moore for the visitors and Hodson for the locals. In the sixth inning Moore weakened and the locals seved up the game in successive hits. Baggett, Webb and Jennings hit well for the locals while Moore was the hitting star for the visitors, he getting the longest hit of the game, a home run.

Batteries: First game—Capitol View, Miller, Moore and Boggs; Powder Springs, Landrum and McTyre. Second game—Capitol View, Moore and Holbrook; Powder Springs, Hodson and McTyre.

DIEGEL SETS NEW RECORD

Chicago, July 6.—(By the Associated Press.)—With a course record of 66, set in the practice by Leo Diegel, a new champion to shoot at, contestants entered in the record field of 288 for the national open golf championship began to whirl around the Skokie Golf course today, preparing for the first section of the three elimination rounds that starts Monday.

With fairways made fast for lack of rain, although offering fine lies because of the abundant turf, the expert golfers seeking the crown of James Barnes, of New York, are able to drive to prodigious lengths.

Gliding the numerous sand traps is not so easy, as the fast course tends to let the balls roll, so that a sliced or hooked shot will trickle into the cavities.

On the greens the velvety grass is so even that even a golf ball that has not been tested for springiness will run true to the putters' touch.

The weather thus far has been ideal; warm enough to limber the muscles and yet not so hot that it enervates the player on the strenuous round of 6,348 yards. Diegel's record performance of 66, set in the practice round, proved that while the course is fast, the greens are safe enough to hold well pitched shots perfectly. The former Detroit player, who tied for second place at Toledo two years ago when Ted Ryan won the title, had 5 birdies, going out in the remarkable score of 31. There was only one 5 and nothing higher on his card. He garnered 12 4s, one of these being one above par; three 3s and two 2s, lacking only a few inches of scoring a cuckoo one on the second hole.

BOB BAUGH JR. LOW MEDALIST

Birmingham, Ala., July 6.—Only three out-of-town golfers qualified in the first flight of the Hobcock Country club's annual invitation tournament, which began here this afternoon. Mike Thomas, Nashville; Glenn Crisman, of Selma; and George Pollock Boyd, Chattanooga, will fight it out with five Birmingham golfers in the first flight.

Bob Baugh, Jr., a 16-year-old lad, of Birmingham, led in the qualifying round, turning in a 76 for the 18 holes. Boyd and Ike Osburn tied for second honors, with 77s.

The field of entry included 118 golfers, who took off in the qualifying round today. Perry Adair, Atlanta, former Dixie champion, was called to Louisville, and was unable to enter the meet today.

First and second round matches are scheduled for Friday, with semi-finals and finals on Saturday.

KANSAS' ARM WAS BROKEN

Chicago, July 6.—X-ray pictures of Rocky Kansas' left arm today showed an oblique fracture of the small bone and it probably will be two months before he can return to the ring, according to Dr. C. W. K. Briggs, of Chicago, who treated the Buffalo lightweight after his injury in his contest with Benny Leonard at Michigan City, Ind., July 4.

"It is a bad break about four inches above the wrist," Dr. Briggs said.

Kansas is on his way home, heartbroken. Ten days before the contest he buried his father and the day before the match he received word that his mother was dangerously ill. This latest shock, according to his handlers, broke his fighting spirit.

Douglasville Wins.

Douglasville, Ga., July 6.—(Special.)—Douglasville defeated the fast Cartersville team here this afternoon in one of the prettiest games ever seen here in many years before a large crowd, by the score of 2 to 1. It was another pitchers' battle between Peace and Jake Morris, with Peace having the best of it. He gave up 4 scattered hits and struck out 8 men, besides in the ninth he drove out a single, driving in Simms with the winning run.

Morris, the former Oglethorpe star, pitched a fine game also, giving up eight hits and striking out four men. Cartersville had scored the only run on a wild throw in the third, but Dorris sent one far over the fence in the seventh tying the game. Cartersville had a chance in the ninth to score but Peace struck out Vandergriff and Barnhardt in the pinch.

Score by innings: R. H. E. Cartersville . . . 001 000 000—1 5 1 Douglasville . . . 000 000 101—2 8 1 Batteries: J. Morris and Vandergriff; Peace and Smith.

Golfers Break Par at Skokie

Chicago, July 6.—(By the Associated Press.)—No fewer than six golfers shot the course of the Skokie Country club in fewer than 70, which is par for the 6,508 yard links in practice for the national open golf championship tournament which will start on that course next Monday.

C. L. Mothersole, of New York and Tom Kennett and Jim Weager of Chicago scored 68 each, while Leo Diegel, of New Orleans and Laurie Ayson and Alfred Hackbart, of Chicago, chalked up 69s for the 18 holes.

It developed today that the record 66 shot on the Skokie course yesterday was made by William Melhorn, of Shreveport, La., instead of Leo Diegel, the erroneous report being due to some jesting by the players with an attaché of the club, who made the reports to newspapers after the players had left the course. Diegel, however, did shoot the links in 68 the other day, and a few days ago scored a 65 at Detroit.

Melhorn today scored a par 70. Jack Hutchison, recent British champion took 71 strokes, while Frank Godaux, of New Orleans, runner-up at Skokie, scored 72.

Additional entries received today swelled the record total to 310, and it is thought a dozen more will sign up as contestants before play starts on Monday with one third of the total entrants playing 36 holes for qualification.

FIRST EVENT OVER AT AMERICUS GOLF CLUB

Americus, Ga., July 6.—(Special.) Matches at the Americus golf club for the estimating of handicaps have resulted in George Earl Ansel being declared Americus' premier golfer. Others who finished well up in the trials were Evan Mathis, second; Middleton McDonald, third, and C. S. Glover, fourth.

After landing often in the second and third, Dundee shot a left to the head in opening the fourth that sent Sharkey to his knees for a short count.

Sharkey came out of his spell for a brief rally in the fifth and took another lead in the seventh. Then Dundee drew blood from a cut over Sharkey's left eye.

Sharkey's unwillingness to mix it caused a chorus of boos from the crowd at the finish.

FITZGERALD WINS FROM ALBANY 2 TO 1

Albany, Ga., July 6.—Albany failed to hit Red Willis effectively this afternoon and Fitzgerald won the opening game of the series, 2 to 1. Thompson also pitched good ball, but a leak in his support allowed the winning run to trickle through. Fitzgerald's first run and Albany's only one were earned counts. Willis scored the visitors' first run, singling, going to second on Baker's sacrifice and counting on Whitley's triple. Albany's pitcher also scored the first run for his team. Thompson singling, going to second on Eldridge's infield fly, to third on a base on balls to Dekle, and scoring on Cameron's sacrifice fly.

Cameron, Clark, Hutcheson and Eldridge made sensational plays for Albany; Cameron leaping into the air and making a one-handed stab of Whitley's line. Clark made several splendid catches, while Hutcheson robbed several visiting batsmen by splendid pickups and throws. Baker, Bennett and Hays performed brilliantly for the visiting team, Hays having six putouts in centerfield, some of them being exceedingly difficult.

To score by innings: R. H. E. Fitzgerald . . . 001 001 000—2 8 4 Albany . . . 010 000 000—1 6 2 Batteries: Willis and Wright; Thompson and Powers. Umpires Pate and Tapley.

DUNDEE WINS DECISION

New York, July 6.—Johnny Dundee earned the judge's decision over Jack Sharkey in a fifteen-round bout to night. Dundee weighed 129 pounds and Sharkey 127.

Sharkey loafed along with occasional rallies until the fourth. Dundee did the leading after a cautious first round but at times found it difficult to reach Sharkey who often walked away with his back turned. During several rounds Sharkey did little except cover up and with both hands Dundee peppered him continually.

After landing often in the second and third, Dundee shot a left to the head in opening the fourth that sent Sharkey to his knees for a short count.

"Oh, well, Brother Johnson, boys will be boys," soothingly said the presiding rider. "That's all right, parson," responded Gap Johnson, of Jumps Ridge. "What I object to is boys being catamounts?"—Kansas City Star

TILDEN IN SEMI-FINALS

Indianapolis, Ind., July 6.—William T. Tilden, II, Philadelphia, world champion, will play Walter Westbrook, Detroit, and Zeno Shimizu, Japanese Davis cup player, will meet Charles Garland, Jr., Pittsburg, in the semi-finals matches of the twelfth national senior clay court tennis championship singles as a result of victories today at the Woodstock Country club.

Westbrook and Shimizu will play Friday and the other semi-final match will be played Saturday.

Wray Brown, of St. Louis, Washington university player, pushed Tilden the hardest he has been played during the tournament when he won the champion's service and led in the first set, 4-3. Tilden's overhead drives, however, won the first set, 6-4. Brown again held Tilden two-alls in the second set, when his brilliant stroking weakened, and Tilden took the set and match 6-2.

Shimizu quickly disposed of Theodore Drewes, St. Louis, 6-1, 6-0, and Westbrook defeated Arthur Hubbell, Chicago, 6-3, 6-4.

Garland defeated Fritz Bastian, Indianapolis, 6-0, 6-4.

"Civilian Clothes"
(At the Forsyth.)
"Civilian Clothes," at the Forsyth this week, contains perhaps more funny lines and sayings in three acts than are found in Life, Judge, Puck and other so-called humorous publications in a year and for that reason the audiences have been convulsed with laughter at every performance.
And "Civilian Clothes" is not only funny, but it also contains many lessons and morals.

The best lesson ever offered in
"How to make a woman learn her own heart," is part of the plot in "Civilian Clothes." There are many in the audience who are undoubtedly benefiting from the doctrine set forth by "Sam McGinnis," John Littel, as to the way to make "Flo Langdon," Minna Com-bell, his wife, become a wife in more than name only and it is needless to favorable impression at their very first appearance here.

Billy Doss, the blackface comedian, just about broke up the show on Thursday night. His jokes are raw and his songs pleasing. It's all in the way he puts them over that gets Billy his full share of applause whenever he appears in Atlanta.
Tom Duray and Irene Sarle have an enjoyable rube sketch, "The Rube's Love for His Horse." Mr.
Duray is a splendid rube character, and is ably assisted by Miss Sarle in the presentation of the clever farce.

Other acts are Nick Verga and Gladys, two Italian character singers and Cooper and Seamon, equi-librists. The feature picture on the screen is "Why Men Forget."

"School Days"
(At the Howard.)
The appeal of school days is irresistible, because it serves to bring back to the older generation the days when they were a couple of kids; to the youngsters it will serve as a treat because they can witness one of their own kind. There is the familiar swimmer hole, the familiar pal, a dog, and the familiar little shanty, the schoolhouse, big enough to take care of a handful of youngsters, and a teacher who is a little Brown, is an orphan. His guardian, a stern man, uses the rod in order to bring about obedience. But spend more or less ignores him, until one day he meets his wealthy uncle.
Then things begin to change.

"They Like 'Em Rough"
(At the Metropolitan.)
The Metropolitan's program for anniversary week continues to find favor with large audiences. Viola Dana, once a favorite in Atlanta, is enjoying an even larger following since her recent personal appearance in Atlanta. In her latest comedy,

"They Like 'Em Rough," she has one of her happiest roles—that of an exceedingly nervous bit of feminine beauty who precipitates herself into an unprepared marriage and finds that when "Greek" meets Greek then comes a tug of war.

"Out of the Dust"
(At the Strand.)
John P. McCarthy's production, "Out of the Dust," at the Strand, is stirring and entertaining. Mr. Mc-Carthy received his inspiration from the Frederick Republican paintings dealing with floods. The old-time dance hall provides atmosphere for the big climax, where Martha Evans' husband gives the strain the beating that he deserves. In addition to pleats of sentiment, it contains some exciting fights with the Indians and a desperate fight of man to man.

Bill Will Not Halt Spring St.
Viaduct Plans

Construction of the Spring street viaduct by the city of Atlanta will not be halted by a resolution introduced in the legislature Thursday by Representative Harper Hamilton, of Floyd, asking for the repeal of the bill passed last year giving the consent of the legislature to the building of the viaduct, according to statements made Thursday by Judge Hamilton, author of the resolution, and others.

Judge Hamilton said he introduced the measure as Chairman C. M.
Candler, of the state railroad commission, and representatives of the railroads could appear before a house committee and present certain views they have relative to providing needed safeguards for the state in the matter.

Judge Hamilton is chairman of the Western and Atlantic railroad commission, which he denied the consent of the lessors of that railroad was necessary before the viaduct could be constructed across its tracks.

Chairman Candler, of the railroad commission, stated Thursday night that he knew nothing of the introduction of the resolution by Judge Hamilton until Thursday afternoon.

"Last year when the first bill was presented in the house giving the consent of the state to the building of the viaduct I objected to its passage on the ground that the matter was one that should be left to the railroad commission for its approval. I did not oppose giving the consent of the state to the project, but simply expressed the view that the matter should be approved by the railroad commission just as other matters in connection with the state-owned railroads are approved by that body. The bill to which I had objected never came up for passage. Later a consent bill was passed but I did not know anything about it until it had been adopted, so made no objection."

The question of whether or not the state could repeal its consent bill was raised Thursday night and it was pointed out that after the state had given its consent the city of Atlanta had gone on with its development plans and had acted in good faith on the agreement.

Hamilton Douglas, Jr., Urged to Enter Race
For the Legislature

Hamilton Douglas, Jr., widely-known Atlanta attorney, was Thursday undecided whether he will enter the race for the legislature from Fulton county following the urging of many friends who he said were petitioning him to make the race.

"I have taken two or three days to think the thing over," said Mr. Douglas.

las, "and expect to make my position clear in a very short time. It is true that influence has been brought to bear to make me a candidate, but as yet I have nothing definite to say."

Mr. Douglas organized the first Boy Scout organization in Atlanta about ten years ago and is prominent in legal and civic circles of the city.

Money Conditions Greatly Improved
Declares Gibson

General financial conditions have improved greatly within the past twelve months and the only factor that would produce an early crisis would be the passage of an unwise bonus bill, the Atlanta Real Estate board was told Thursday by Bayne Gibson, of Veyman & Connors, local attorneys who are the legal advisors on the present money market.

"If a bill were passed providing for a sudden increase of a billion in the national debt, the money market would be a short period of extravagance based on free spending by the veterans," he said.

"This would soon be brought to a halt by the federal reserve bank and then we would have another reaction.
There are two reasons, however, why the bonus bill is unlikely to cause trouble. First, the federal reserve has indicated that he will veto any bill which does not provide revenues to pay the bonus. The second reason is that the federal reserve bank considered by the legislative committee in charge of the bonus contemplate payment by installments.

"Conditions are a great deal better than they were a year ago and indefinitely better than two years ago when it seemed the whole world was going to the bow-wow. A great number of things have happened since then. The terrible period of deflation which began in the late fall of 1919. For a year or more beginning at that time, money became scarce and credit was denied by the banks. It was almost impossible to get money from the banks. One banker was presented with a note that had no money endorsement on it and he was kind of a petition, turned it over and signed it also.

"Agricultural relationships to business are fundamental. The farmers have been having a hard time, but now practically all farm products have increased in value, including cotton. In addition to this, diversification is increasing more and more.

"There has been a rapid growth in building in the past few months. In 1919 the United States was short of many essential commodities. It seems we are trying to catch up. Building permits have increased 135 per cent over 1921."

SOLDIERS' HOME RAPIDS EFFICIENCY
EXPERT'S REPORT

The board of trustees of the Soldiers' home at its quarterly meeting, July 5, adopted resolutions charging several errors in the report of the expert who investigated the home recently. They also resolved to place the report of the investigation "by the said expert" in the hands of some disinterested party to arrive at the truth or falsity of the charges made in the report.

They answer some of the specific charges of inefficiency at the home in these words:
"The man who performs electrical work is clerk to the superintendent, employing odd moments in the installation of a radio apparatus, which, in addition to the duties of the clerk, will furnish amusement to the old men.

"The man whose work consisted of the care of some 250 to 200 chickens is one of the night orderlies at the hospital; for in addition to the night watchman, an orderly is kept at all hours to attend to the wants of the patients.

"The men pointed out by Mr. Trufford as not sufficiently employed, are performing the most important duties at the least possible expense," says the board.

The statement of the board of trustees iterates the statement in their report for the year 1921, "That the superintendent is a man of great individual than that of any of the 14 states having a confederate home."

CONSIDER STRAHAN AS TECH HEAD

Board Meets July 12 to to Elect Matheson's Successor—Brittain, Brough and Patterson Mentioned

Athens, Ga., July 6. (Special.)—
The name of Dr. Charles M. Strahan, head of the engineering department of Georgia and formerly chairman of the state highway board, is being mentioned as president of Georgia Tech to succeed Dr. K. G. Matheson, it became known today.

The board will meet July 12 for the purpose of naming Dr. Matheson's successor.

M. L. Brittain, who has announced his intention not to ask re-election as state school superintendent, Ex-Governor Brough, of Arkansas, and Dr.
A. H. Patterson, of Copper Hill, N. C., and former member of the University of Georgia faculty are also prominent mentioned.

E. R. Hodgson, Jr., and H. J. Rowe are local members of the board of trustees.

IRISH INSURGENTS THREATEN CABLES

graph says it was freely reported in Bray, a suburb of Dublin, last night, that Dr. Valera has been wounded;
which, in a closed place, might cause
"fainting and temporary exhaustion."

President Frank Healy, of the In-terborough, later issued a statement in which he denied the use of the extinguisher fluid had been the cause of the smoke and gases which filled the train. The extinguisher, he said, had been adopted only after it had been approved by the fire underwriters and the U. S. government as one of the most effective for putting out fires similar to that of today.

LEAGUE ONLY HOPE FOR WORLD PEACE

It is high time for the supreme council to wind up its activities.
There is at the moment one direction only in which we can look with hope for the establishment of peace on earth. The covenant of the league of nations stands in the forefront of all the treaties of the last three years. It was signed by the representatives of over 30 states and that number has since been increased to 51.

There is, I find, a widely spread impression that the league, which has started on its way, is a failure.
As a matter of fact, however, it is a more or less academic debating society, where many things are talked about, and little is actually achieved.
This, in addition to the slow, is an opinion based upon ignorance, and at complete variance with the real facts.

Serious Drawbacks.
It is, of course, true that the league has been handicapped by some unfor-seeable hindrances. The failure of the United States to ratify the treaty, and the continued absence of great European nations such as Germany, are serious drawbacks to its moral authority.

The prime ministers and foreign ministers of the allied powers, who are always ready to attend anything that is called a conference, are rarely, if ever, present at the meetings of the council of the league.

Overshadowed by League.
It has been overshadowed from the first by the supreme council of the allies, who, though they have not hesitated to pass on to its tasks of peace, have been too busy to do so.
The numerous conferences which have been held, the league of nations was responsible for almost the only success of the allied powers. The results—those of Brussels and Barcelona. It has, moreover, when it has been given a chance, been eminently successful in the discharge of one of its primary functions—the prevention and the healing of international disputes.

Disputes Settled.
In the controversy between Sweden and Finland over the Aland Islands, the decision which gave the islands to Finland, and at the same time demilitarized them, and provided ample safeguards for the rights of the Swedish population, has settled what threatened to be a troublesome situation.

The case of Albania, which was menaced with invasion by the Jugo-Slavs, is an interesting illustration of what may be done by a judicious threat of economic pressure. It was by this means that the league prevented the outbreak of hostilities. The country, which has a somewhat turbulent history, is now said to be perfectly tranquil, and is governed by Albanians on a basis of independence.
Still more striking has been the success—so far, at any rate—of the intervention of the league in the troubled waters of the Balkans. In present themselves in Upper Silesia. The task of unraveling had proved too difficult for the supreme council, who relegated it to Geneva.

Racial Chances.
To devise an ideal, or even a practicable boundary, under the conditions prescribed by the treaty, in such a chaos of racial and economic entanglement, was almost beyond the wit of man; and the line actually traced by the league was the subject of much adverse criticism, not only by both the parties concerned, but by disinterested outsiders.

It was accompanied, however, by the wise provision that for five years there was to be complete economic freedom of intercourse and interchange on both sides, and it is satisfactory to learn that a commission of Germans and Poles have amicably worked out the details of a convention said to contain 700 clauses, and now ratified to regulate the future.

The league is bringing together, in its periodic assemblies at Geneva, representative men from the countries of all constituent members, not for the purpose of exchanging platitudes, or capping one another's perorations, but for the discussion and settlement, in its various commissions and sub-commissions, of the practical problem which affect the well being and peace of the whole human hold of nations.

On Disarmament.
Of these none transcends, or indeed equals in importance that of disarmament. It may be asked what the league has done or is doing in this matter. The answer is that for the first time in the history of mankind, a serious and considered plan is being made by a commission comprising statesmen, military and naval experts, economists, and representatives of labor to work out a definite plan which can be submitted to the 51 states which are constituents of the league.

All these problems are interrelated. None of them can be isolated, or, one after another, dealt with separately. The league, however, once that fundamental condition is recognized, there may be found a way to permanent peace.

What are the milestones which mark the progress of the league?
My answer is clear.

Milestones to Peace.
1.—We must ascertain definitely, once for all, and be prepared to liquidate, the whole account of reparations and international indebtedness.
2.—We must get rid of the superstructure that has been built up by the bankers' committee at Paris.
3.—We must have a preliminary process has been gone through, we shall know exactly what are—not the paper—but the real obligations of the nations. We must be provided for the financial aspect of the business world will then prove equal to the task of meeting and distributing them, not only with the minimum of disturbance, but with the maximum of stability, for international trade.

3.—We must get rid of the super-council, and make the league of nations (which, if possible, in the near future, will be the real arbiter in international concerns.

4.—We must make all compacts between particular states subject to general international agreement, and where treaty obligations are involved, enforceable only by collective guarantees.

This is not intended to be an exhaustive catalogue of the methods by which war can be made impossible.
It may still be a long time before we reach the realization of the Psalm:
"The meek shall inherit the earth."
But I am satisfied that along this road, and this road only, can we make any progress that is worth the name.

OFFICER IS HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Columbus, Ga., July 6.—J. B. Miller, a motorcycle policeman, was bound over to the grand jury under $1,500 bond here today after a hearing before Recorder Walker Flournoy, on charges of having shot and killed John L. Aeschbacher, 17, while the policeman was chasing an automobile in which the lad was riding.

Miller, who was charged by the recorder with involuntary manslaughter, said he would report for duty at police headquarters tomorrow. The grand jury is expected to take up the case the latter part of this month.

Infant Death Rate In Atlanta Falls 88 Per Cent in 3 Years

Through the efforts of the local child welfare associations, infant mortality in Atlanta has been reduced tremendously since the movement was inaugurated in 1917, according to the annual report of the American Child Hygiene association, made public Thursday.

Better babies campaigns, baby clinics and improvement of living conditions, sanitation and milk, fostered by public health bureau, the Woman's club and various civic organizations, is responsible for the saving of hundreds of babies in Atlanta and transferring this city from the highest to the lowest death rate class, it was stated in the report.

In 1917, it was estimated that approximately 157 babies under 12 months of age, out of every thousand, died from lack of proper attention. Figures for 1921, show this rate has dropped to 88, or almost 100 per cent decrease in infant mortality.

Other cities of Atlanta's population which were included in the report show a substantial reduction in death rate of children since the movement started.

HOUSE NEXT DOOR POLICE STATION RAIDED THURSDAY

A crap-shooting game under the very shadow of the police chief's office was raided Thursday evening, and four men placed under arrest. Lonnie Stone, clerk, was standing in the lavatory of the chief's office, when he happened to look out of the window and see four men in the house next door, 171 1-2 Decatur street, indulging, they say, in a game of "African golf." He called City Detectives Cochran, Satterfield, Austin, and Detective Sergeant Doyle, who watched the proceedings about 15 minutes, then slipped up the stairs and arrested the participants. Their names are: Andrew Jordan, age 26, of Temple, Ga.; Roy Murphy, age 22, of Bellview avenue; Henry McWhorter, age 27, and Ben Gilland, age 25, of 171 1-2 Decatur street. They are being held under bond of $25 each.

Booze Merchants Must Pay Taxes Or Expect Raids

Savannah, Ga., July 7.—(Special.) The first effort made in this part of the state looking to the collection of income taxes from persons suspected of being engaged in the liquor business was made today, when federal agents under Deputy Marshal G. R. Golding raided the place of Fred Haar, near the city.

Forty thousand dollars' worth of diamond rings, a long list of supposed customers of the whisky traffic, fifteen or twenty thousand dollars in negotiable securities and an elaborate and expensive wireless outfit were discovered by the officers.

One officer stated, "This wireless outfit, powerful and complete, has done more to protect the big dealers in the liquor business and warn smugglers bringing in contraband stores to shore than any one other agency. We have had time of boats due to arrive and slip in to unload, and then found that they have been warned in time to change their plans."

Officers were warned, it is said, by outsiders not to make too thorough search, and an attorney for Haar vigorously protested that the marshal had no warrant for search of the safe in the place of business.

Agents continued their work, however.

Haar was brought to the federal authorities by "due process" a few weeks ago to answer to allegations that he had not made income tax returns for four years. He had at the time a passport for Germany and was on the eve of departing, but was required to remain to answer at a hearing to be had soon.

LAWYER'S ARREST CAUSED BY STORY TOLD BY WOMAN

Ed Johnson, 39 years of age, of 14-B W. Baker street, who states that he is an attorney, was arrested Thursday by City Detectives A. G. Stone, B. P. Gillespie and Policewoman Miss Dora Lee Vause, and is being held at the police station under $500 bond on a blanket charge of disorderly conduct.

Johnson was arrested on complaint of a young woman, who told the police authorities that she had answered Johnson's advertisement for a stenographer or clerical worker, and that he told her the place had just been filled, but expressed himself as being very anxious to do something for her. A few moments' conversation Johnson made an improper proposal to her, she says. She then left his office and called the police.

The police authorities then set a trap for Johnson which, they say, was carried out successfully.
